ROOSEVELT UNEARTHED GRAFT AT PITTSBURG

Ex-President Tells How He Detailed Treasury Official to Ferret Out Corrupt Bargains in the Smoky City.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 10.—The Western tour of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was virtually concluded in Pittsburg tonight. He stopped here long enough to deliver two addresses and attend an informal dinner. He will be at home at Oyster Bay again tomorrow for the rest of which he is greatly in need.

The last day was one of the most spectacular of Colonel Roosevelt's long trip. Leaving Cincinnati in the morning, he cut across Ohio into West Virginia and western Pennsylvania. At the several short stops he made, throngs were on hand to greet him. The last of the rear platform speeches of the trip was made at Steubenville, O., this afternoon.

The ex-President talked about the homely virtues which have been his text many times before.

At London, O., a man crowded up close to the platform, holding a gourd, which resembled the "big stick." The colonel took it in his arms and held it there while he talked about corporations.

Thousands of Pittsburg people sacrificed their usual dinner hour this evening and crowded down town streets to welcome the distinguished guest, who had not paid Pittsburg a visit for more than eight years.

FROM HISTORIC BALCONY.

After an informal dinner he was driven cross-town where from a historic balcony of the Monongahela house facing the river of that name, he addressed an enormous crowd.

From this restrum Henry Clay, the late King Edward (then Prince of Wales), General Grant and the martyred Presidents, Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley, have addressed the Pittsburg people.

Standing where these notable figures in history had stood, Colonel Roosevelt viewed the sea of humanity before him, the waters of the Monongahela shimmering in the flood of electric light from surrounding buildings.

"I have seen many extraordinary sights in the last two and a half weeks, but I have met nothing like this," he said.

"I have a peculiar feeling in speaking from this historic balcony. The many great names associated with this place, and so many national memories of which we are proud, spur us on to action in our turn, but they are worse than useless if we treat them merely as excuses for idleness in ourselves. We of today have great problems and we must face them as our fathers and forefathers faced the problems of their generation. Our first and greatest problem is to secure rigid honesty in business and politics, and I congratulate Pittsburg on what Pittsburg has done. That man is the true benefactor who opposes crookedness and who hunts out of public life the crook, great and small."

The cheers which greeted the colonel kept him on his feet most of the time bowing his acknowledgements.

FIVE THOUSAND ENTHUSIASTS.

At Exposition Hall a "citizenship rally" greeted the colonel's coming. Five thousand men jumped and danced and waved their hats and yelled themselves hoarse as the guests ascended the platform. The band struck up "A Hot Time," and the colonel raised first one foot and then the other as though to dance.

The crowd broke out anew. Women helped in the ovation, too, for in boxes on either side were reservations for the leaders of the prominent woman's civic clubs and civic organizations. It was five minutes before Mayor Magee and President English of the Civic Commission were allowed to make introductory speeches. Over the stage from which Colonel Roosevelt spoke hung a huge map of the world, on which was painted black lines showing Roosevelt's travels since he left the White House, over Africa, Europe and America.

The colonel said in part:

"I have always liked Pittsburg. I think that Pittsburg represents in many respects an epitome of the American people. It has the characteristics of our people developed to an unusual degree: energy, power, force, keen business intelligence, rigid industry, immense versatility of mind, all the qualities of a vigorous, masterful people. I wish I could stop there, but there are certain American traits you all possess that are less desirable. As a nation we have sometimes tended to think only of the things of the body; as a nation we have sometimes taken a hard, material, short-sighted pride in being merely practical and not dreamers.

"The short-sighted men, timid men and the men of sordid mind always turn, when such a work as that which this association was done under Mr. English has been accomplished, and say: 'You ought not to do that; you hurt Pittsburg.' The people that hurt Pittsburg are the people that are corrupt.

HUNTING OUT GRAFT.

"It was my good fortune to have a connection with the beginning of the inquiry in this city that developed the extraordinary crookedness. At that time I was President, and after some correspondence one or two of your representative citizens came to me and said that they had every reason to believe that an examination of certain banks would disclose a scandalous connection between certain business men and certain politicians to rob the city. And they asked me if I could not have the bank investigated by a man whom I knew to be straight and honest. I said I certainly could, so I asked the treasury department—I did not tell anybody what was to be done—but I asked the department to give me a man whom they knew to be straight. I got the man and sent him here. I was very much amused over one incident.

"An acquaintance, almost a friend of mine, in a political position, came to me and said that he understood that some visionary people were trying to cause trouble, and trying to influence me to take action against worthy citizens. He hoped that I would not do it. I told him he could be sure I would join with him in seeing that no worthy citizen was scorched and that I would expect him to join with me to see that I got at every crook that I possibly could. Well, as I say, my part was merely a very slight part, but I think I may say, Mr. President, the investigation made by Mr. Nesbitt for the national government has opened the way to discovery of corruption. You have put nearly a score of men in the penitentiary or jail. You have got confessions from about double that number.

"You have a number of others under indictment. And I want to point out that as a matter of just pride that you have not only got the politicians, not only got the small man, but you have got the man higher up."

OHIOANS MUST RENDER JUSTICE

COLUMBUS, Sept. 10.—In language as emphatic as he could make it Colonel Roosevelt told the people of Columbus today that scenes of disorder such as had ocurred here during the street car strike were reprehensible and reflected disgrace upon any person who either was responsible for them or tolerated them. Colonel Roosevelt spoke to one of the largest crowds of his Western tour. He was guarded by an escort of regular troops from the barracks at Columbus, although there was no sign of disorder.

The Colonel raised his voice to the highest pitch and, with fists clenched and his face set sternly, he told them that it was their first duty to repress lawlessness.

Mayor Marshall of Columbus, whose conduct of the police force during the strike has been the subject of much discussion, said to Colonel Roosevelt after he had finished his address:

"You don't know how much strength you have given me."

Policemen who heard the ex-President denounce the officer of the law who did not repress lawlessness, went to him and shook his hand. The great crowd cheered him for several minutes.

LAW AND ORDER.

Colonel Roosevelt's address was as follows:

"Before I came to Ohio, I of course knew of the lamentable condition which has continued for so many weeks here at Columbus.

"As soon as I entered Ohio, and ever since then, I have from time to time been addressed by letter and even personally by both sides, asking me to come to Columbus and speak. I will say frankly that I did not like to come here, but I like still less dodging, and so I have come.

"I notice I have been advertised to speak on the subject of law and order, and so I shall. But I shall also speak on justice, for exactly as it the duty of all good citizens to see absolutely and without reserve that law and order prevail, it is just as much their duty to see that justice prevails.

"The first requisite to the establishment of justice is the establishment of law and order and woe to the man, public official or private citizen, who fails to realize this fact. And especially should we abhor and reprobate the conduct of the public servant who for any reason fails in his duty in this respect. We must equally condemn the public servants and ourselves. The people also are as responsible as the public servants.

"If we stop content with the mere establishment of law and order, we fail to do our further duty which is by thoroughgoing investigation to find but whether justice has been denied and injustice committed, and then to use the whole power of the government to right any wrong that has been done.

ACTS OF VIOLENCE.

"Now at the outset let me say as clearly as possible that I do not and cannot undertake to say what the exact facts are, for thoroughly reputable citizens, writing to me on behalf of the two sides, flatly contradict each other. But there are certain broad points directly applicable to your present situation which can be laid down without hesitation. There is no question whatever but what many acts of violence have been committed, including bomb throwing and the use of that weapon of the worst, meanest, the basest and the most cowardly type of assassins—dynamite.

"Now the first duty of the governmental authorities, high and low, from top to bottom, is to put an end to the reign of violence and disorder, to check and punish every crime of brutality and lawlessness. No excuse can be accepted for any government official who fails to do his duty in this regard and no excuse can be accepted for any private citizens who fail, not merely passively but actively, to perform the prime duty of good citizenship in joining with the authorities in helping to put an end to such an intolerable condition.

JUDICIAL WARNING.

"I call your attention to what Judge Sater did a year ago in the case of the striking miners in Southern Ohio. The employers applied to him for an injunction against the miners. He declined to grant it, but he gave to both parties a lecture from the bench, to which I am glad to say, they paid heed. He warned them that violence would not be permitted and that the whole power of the state would, if necessary be invoked to suppress it.

"He warned the miners particularly that their worst enemies were those among their own nuember or their sympathizers who committed deeds of violence and he warned the capitalists that deeds of violence by the employers did just as much damage to their cause and were just as flagrant outrages against the public as the deeds of violence committed by the miners and sympathizers of the miners, and that one would be no more tolerated than the other. Therefore, friends, your first duty is to establish law and

FOR SAKE OF PARTY

Says He Has Quit Contest to Save State From the Republicans.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 10.—In a scorching statement Governor Malcolm R. Patterson tonight withdrew from his candidacy as the Democratic nominee for governor of Tennessee, furnishing a sensational climax to a long and bitter preliminary campaign. The governor has already served two terms, and announced his candidacy for a third term in compliance with the wishes of the state committee, who declared him the Democratic nominee without opposition. The opponents of the governor declined to enter a primary, preferring to submit the matter to a convention and the governor in order to avoid the threatened split, withdrew in the interest of harmony.

In a signed statement given the Associated Press tonight the governor says:

"I became a candidate for governor for the third term contrary to my personal wishes. Conditions have arisenn, however, which appear to make my further candidacy an injustice both to my friends and the Democratic party.

"When the opposition to me assumed the shape of a refusal to enter a primary called by the state executive committee, I proposed if any gentleman would offer to run against me to allow him to select his own method and time of nomination, with an equal division of officers of election. There was not and could not be the slightest excuse to refuse this if the party was to preserve its organization and not disintegrate into schisms and factions; but the proposition was rejected. I was declared the nominee for governor without opposition and since then I have offered to yield my nomination so as to test anew whether it was the choice of the majority.

"But to the minds of my ungenerous opponents, all things were fair as a means to the end of my political destruction. Even then I did not believe that any considerable number of Democrats could be betrayed from their allegiance but now it seems certain that the continued appeals to passion and credulity have found a lodgment which neither fact nor persuasion can change and that so long as I remain a candidate, a considerable number of Democrats will not affiliate wit's the party, and, while not large comparatively, it is enough to imperil Democratic success in November. I do not wish itsald that my desire for office is responsible for this condition or as furnishing an excuse to endorse a Republican candidate by the so-called Independent Democratic campaign soon to be held in Nashville.

"My conclusion is that I can best serve my party and state in this emergency by voluntarily doing what my enemies have so persistently demanded. I therefore return my nomination to the Democratic party."

SOCIALISTS MEET IN CONVENTION

A new state central committee was elected and a platform, which will be adopted tomorrow, was drafted.

This evening a mass meeting was held at which addresses were made by J. Stitt Wilson of Berkeley, Socialist candidate for governor; Job Harriman of Los Angeles, for United States senator; Fred C. Wheeler of Los Angelds, candidate for lieutenant governor, and E. L. Reguin of San Francisco, candidate for Congress, fifth district.

HAMILTON'S INJURIES ARE NOT SERIOUS

Aviator Will Soon Be About in Spite of His Bad Fall.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 10.—After one of the hardest falls in his career as an aviator, Charles K. Hamilton today is suffering only from cuts and bruises on the body and a shaking up that will keep him in bed for several days. Hamilton's fall last night in a race around the fair ground's track with an automobile was a miraculous escape from death His machine drove head foremost to the ground at an altitude of 70 feet, and he was buried beneath the engine and wreckage. Spectators expected to find him dead but he was conscious when carried from the grounds. No bones are broken and a further examination today by attending physicians found him very sore, but not suffering serious internal injuries.

THAW'S ATTORNEYS WILL TRY AGAIN TO SECURE HIS RELEASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Newly engaged counsel for Harry K. Thaw are quoted in the New York World for tomorrow as predicting that Thaw will shortly renew his battle to gain freedom from the state hospital for the insane at Matteawan, where he has been confined since his trial on the charge of killing Stanford White.

"Thaw is sane. It will be a matter of only a few months until he is free," Henry J. Rice, an associate of Clarence J. Shearn, the well known lawyer, is quoted as asserting.

"If Thaw had recovered his sanity we should make a report to the state and he would be allowed his freedom," returned Dr. Amos T. Baker, assistant superintendent in Matteawan. "He is under constant surveillance."

Other hospital attendants are quoted as saying that Thaw gets worse instead of better.

REMARKABLE TRIP MADE BY AVIATOR BALDWIN

Fourteen Mile Trip in 19 Minutes Over and Under Bridges.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10.—Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin made a fourteen mile flight in his aeroplane over the Mississippi river here late this afternoon in nineteen minutes. He crossed over three and flew under two bridges while in the air. Including the time he was on the ground between the flights, it was thirty-six minutes from the time he started until he landed on the aviation ground.

Before starting on the river flight he made two preliminary trips of three minutes each in the air. Then he started toward the river and immediately went over the bridge near the field and continued down the river. Going up into the air 150 feet he crossed an interurban bridge and later the Eads bridge, on which 50,000 people were standing.

He continued down the river and landed in Illinois, seven miles below his starting point. He made the trip in ten minutes. On the upward flight he went under the Eads bridge and narrowly missed a ferry boat as he emerged from a smoke cloud. Before he left the river channel he flew under the interurban bridge and [illegible] on the same spot from which he started. Part of the time the aviator was lost in the smoke clouds. He held his machine at all times at right angles to a thirteen mile wind. Baldwin, who is flying under the auspices of the Post-Dispatch, will make field flights here tomorrow and Monday.

RICH PLACER FOUND IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

VICTORIA, Sept. 10.—Rich placers, where pans giving $15 in gold have been found on tributaries of the Naco river in Northern British Columbia, according to arrivals by the steamer Prince Rupert, from Stewart and Prince Rupert tonight. Many miners stampeded from Stewart and Prince Rupert on receipt of the news.

TWENTY-EIGHT LIVES LOST NEEDLESSLY

LUDINGTON, Mich., Sept. 10.—Thomas Shields, a coal passer, rescued when Pere Marquette car ferry No. 18 went down in Lake Michigan yesterday with a loss of twenty-eight lives, gave an account of the wreck tonight. He lies at a hospital in a serious condition. This is his story in his own words:

"You see, I'm just a coal passer and I was on watch at 12:30. I noticed that there was water coming in from one of the glass ports, but I didn't thing about it, as sometimes water does come in. Then I saw the mate, Joe Brezinski, and one of the wheelsmen come in and try to fix the glass and the iron or brass that holds the port in. Then Captain Kilty comes and they push clothes and rags into the hole and the captain orders the pumps to be put on. There was a heavy sea pounding, so I tells one of the firemen that water was rushing in.

"Then about 1:30 Captain Kilty tells us we have got to shove cars off so as to lighten the ship. We had a — — of a time getting them off because they would stick and bank over, but we got the twenty-nine off. Then the captain told us to get the port side life boats off, as that was the lee side and the sea wasn't so heavy. There were three boats and we moored them, so they cleared the side. Some of the deckhands got in and kept the life boats from hanging alongside. We loosened all the life rafts so that they would float off when the boat sank.

"We had the flag at half-mast at daylight so that No. 17 certainly knew we were in trouble. No. 17 was getting pretty close to us and I was right alongside of Captain Kilty when he yelled to the 17 that 18 would not last long. But No. 17 didn't come alongside. No, she swung around our stern and came within 100 feet of us on the wind side. I heard Captain Walter Brown, the second mate, yell to the 17 and say, 'For God's sake, what are you doing. Why don't you get a hustle on you.'

"Then the 17 swung [illegible] came over on the lee side, [illegible] stayed away. If they had had any nerve at all they would have saved every mother's son of us. I can swear to it that 17 could have got us all if they had come alongside when they first came up but instead of that they hung off to windward."

LORIMER WITHDREW FROM HAMILTON CLUB IN A HUFF

TO VINDICATE HIM

Original Plan Was to Quit in a Body With the Accused Boodler.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—A terse note of resignation from the Hamilton club, of which he had been a member many years, was the reply made here today by United States Senator William Lorimer to the action of the club president, John H. Batten, in withdrawing his invitation to the Roosevelt banquet Thursday night.

While Senator Lorimer urged that his resignation be accepted immediately, it is said his friends on the club board of governors probably refused to vote its acceptance.

The correspondence from President Batten to Senator Lorimer revealed, it was shown today, that the senator was to have been one of the guests of honor at the banquet. This correspondence also showed that it had been the hope of the club to make the dinner notable as a harmonious occasion at which all factions of the Republican party could break bread together.

At least three invitations were sent to Lorimer, each urging him to attend the banquet and to the last of these he sent his acceptance.

The note of resignation was written after a conference of the Senator with a number of intimate friends and at first was believed to be a cue, which would be followed by a number of his admirers i nthe club. Later it was decided by his friends to prevent the acceptance of the resignation.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 10.—When Colonel Roosevelt heard tonight that Senator Lorimer had resigned from the Hamilton Club he was greatly interested, but would make no comment.

CHOLERA CONTINUES VIRULENT.

ROME, Sept. 10.—The virulency of the cholera in the southeastern section of Italy, continues to manifest itself, there being eight deaths in eleven new cases reported during the last twenty-four hours.

NO EXPLANATION TO WRECK OF FERRY

Not Due to Overloading or to a Breakdown in the Machinery.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Sept. 10.—That yesterday's wreck of Pere Marquette car ferry No. 18 and the loss of twenty-nine lives was not due to a storm, to overloading or to a break-down in the vessel's machinery, and that the real cause of the disaster will never be fully determined, is the conclusion reached by General Superintendent W. D. Trump of the Pere Marquette railroad, who came here yesterday to investigate the wreck.

According to the report sent by Mr. Trump to Pere Marquette headquarters in Detroit today, Captain Russell of steamer No. 17 was merely asked by Captain Kilty, of No. 18, to stand by when he arrived at the scene, Captain Kilty evidently not believing his vessel was in immediate danger.

Captain Russell, however, observed that No. 18 was sinking and lowered his lifeboats just before No. 18 went to the bottom.

According to Mr. Trump, there were sixty-two people on board No. 18. The sixteen above the regular crew were employes of the Chicago Navigation company, with Seymour E. Cochrane, vice-president of the company, and a corps of extra scrubbers, carpet layers, etc., who were working while the boat was moving in order so save time. Mr. Cochrane was saved, but his four employes were lost.

The first intimation those on board No. 18 had that anything was wrong was when the wheelsman, about 4 o'clock a. m., found that the vessel was not responding quickly. The compartment of the engine room was found to contain a considerable amount of water, though not enough to disturb the firemen on deck hands sleeping there.

Distress signals were given as the vessel continued to sink and the lifeboats on the port side were lowered, but not cut away from the ship, Captain Kilty continuing to hold the steamer for the west shore of Lake Michigan.

All of the survivors jumped or were thrown from the boat when she sank and were picked up by boats from steamer No. 17.

COAL STRIKE ENDS.

SPRING VALLEY, Ill., Sept. 10.—After twenty-three weeks' suspension and strike, the six mines of the Spring Valley coal mining district, which includes shafts in this city, Ladd, Dalzell, Seatonville and Marquette, were placed in readiness today to resume work. Three weeks will be required for repair work.

LUMBERMEN'S CONVENTION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10. — An early business session today was the only event on the calendar of the annual convention of the Concatenated Order of Hoo Hoo. The remainder of the day was given over to recreation.

CHINESE SMUGGLED ACROSS THE BORDER IN WOMEN'S ATTIRE

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 10.—A brand new trick for smuggling Chinese across the Mexican line into this country directly under the noses of the immigration officers has come to the attention of the local officers.

For some time past, it is said, certain wily law-breakers have made a practice of loading Orientals into automobiles and carrying them into this country dressed in articles of clothing designed especially for women of ultrafashionable taste and further disguised by means of automobile goggles, picture hats and wide flowing veils. According to the information which has come into the possession of immigration officials the men who originated this plan have been doing a rushing business for the past few weeks, during which time a large number of alien Chinese have been smuggled into the interior, togged out as joy riders.

JORDAN WORKING FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

Dinner Is Given In His Honor at the Parisian Capital.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, California, after attending the International Zoological Congress at Gratz, Austria, and lecturing in Berlin on "Humanity and War," is now in Paris investigating the progress of the "world peace" movement, in connection with the International School of Peace, recently in corporated in the United States.

Frederic Passey, member of the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences, presided at a dinner given tonight in President Jordan's honor, at which Baron d'Estournelles de Constant and other prominent Frenchmen interested in the peace movement were present.

President Jordan will go from Paris to Belgium and later to England to confer with peace workers in those countries. He announces that the directors of the International School of Peace, in addition to himself, probably will be James Brown Scott, solicitor for the Department of State, Washington; James A. MacDonald of Toronto, and Charles R. Brown and Edwin D. Mead of Boston.

TO MAKE A FIGHT ON WYOMING RING

Former Senator Carey Announces Independent Race for Governor.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Sept. 10.—Former United States Senator Maull Carey, father of the so-called Carey enlarged homestead act, today announced in a statement to the people, his independent candidacy for the governorship of Wyoming, giving as his reason a series of charges against what he terms the "Republican state ring." He defines the "ring" as a coterie which he says has dominated Wyoming politics since the state was admitted to the Union.

Carey's statement asserts that the State University and the penitentiary alike have been operated for personal advantage and political ends, alleges irregularities in convict labor and in the auditing of expense accounts, o fstate officials and charge unfitness in men filling appointive places. It also declares the legislature to be controlled by the bosses.

Carey's platform advocates the direct primary law, a corrupt practice act and the election of United States senators direct.

NEXT EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS AT VIENNA

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—Announcement was made today that the next eucharistic congress will be held at Vienna, Austria. There is a possibility that the cprmanent committee of the congress may be asked to hold its sessions in the United States in 1913. Cardinal Gibbons has been a potent advocate of the American claims.

The fifth day of the congress opened with an extraordinary demonstration at the foot of Mount Royal. A pontifical mass was said at a repository built near the base of the mountain with Archbishop Farley of New York celebrant. Fully 75,000 were assembled long before the ceremonies began. The cardinal legate, Vincent Vannutelli, presided and Archbishop O'Connell preached the sermon.

STREET [illegible] CLOSES REVEL OF ADMISSION DAY

San Francisco Thoroughfares Crowded With Merrymakers.

BEAUTIFUL FLOATS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—The festivities attendant upon the Admission Day celebration here drew to a close tonight with gorgeous street pageantry and a grand bal masque at the Auditorium. A crowd that vied in numbers with the great outpouring that witnessed the feature parade on Friday, thronged the streets of the business district to see the final al fresco function of the fiesta.

Many beautiful floats, gaily bedecked and illuminated with electric lights, were in line. Several military organizations took part. Queen California and her court occupied the post of honor in the van of the procession.

A unique feature of the parade was the Chinese contribution. Scores of Chinese school children in uniforms marched and they were followed by a huge representation of the mythical Chinese dragon and by an automobile float which was conspicuous by the beauty of its design and coloring.

Again the streets were a blaze of lights, the set illumination being punctuated by gorgeous showers from soaring rockets and the glow of red and green calciums.

The electrical parade was the official ending of the three days' festivities, but long after the shouting and tumult that marked the procession had died away, the sidewalks teemed with [illegible] of merry-makers and [illegible], and the [illegible] were [illegible].

With the sky afire with [illegible] colored lights, and the [illegible] yules and the lilt of a dozen dancing tunes in the air, the [illegible] confetti-strewn crowds forgot that there is such a phrase as "the olden, golden glory of the days that are no more."

The masked ball was largely attended and the untiring pleasure seekers danced until long after midnight.

BANK EXAMINERS SEVERELY BLAMED

Comptroller Murray Says Many Failures Could Have Been Averted.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Close on the heels of the radical shake up in the ranks of the bank examiners, by which twenty men were shifted on Thursday to new fields, Comptroller of the Currency Murray announced today that he would make a personal investigation of conditions in all examination districts. The comptroller, in a statement addressed to examiners, said: "In almost every case of a national bank failure since I have been comptroller, the insolvency could have been averted had the national bank examiners determined the true condition and reported his findings in time for me to force a correction in the administrations of the bank's affairs."

Condemning the excuses made by bank examiners, Murray said he had been compelled to undertake a personal examination of conditions in every district so as to ascertain at first hand why an examiner was unable to discover impending disaster in the affairs of a bank. He will be accompanied and assisted on the trip by Oscar L. Telling, formerly a national bank examiner, and now chief of the division of reports in the comptroller's office.

After citing that examiners of failed banks had offered excuses that they had been unable to learn in advance of a bank's true condition, that officers and directors of banks would not correct conditions brought to their attention or any one of another dozen reasons, Mr. Murray, in his statement, says:

"The comptroller also desires to ascertain why some examiners are capable of correcting, while they are in the bank, all the conditions subject to criticism, when other examiners are either unable or unwilling to accomplish like results and only report their criticisms to the comptroller's office.

Many of the examiners say in their reports of examinations forwarded to the comptroller's office that it is a hardship not only on the examiners, but on many members of the directory of country banks, to ask the various boards to meet the examiners during the progress or at the close of the examination.

"The comptroller is of the opinion that a board of directors which will not or cannot meet with a representative of the government for a short time twice each year to go over in detail the conditions which he finds and reports to it, is composed of [illegible] who are not doing their duty [illegible] sense of the word, and it is [illegible] posed to find [illegible] ships [illegible] really exist."

Since the year 1905 the decrease has been steady in both wine and brandy, as the following summary will show:

The statistics of the wine producing countries of the world show a large decrease for 1909 as compared with the previous year, amounting to no less than 516,168,322 gallons. In Spain the vintage for 1909 was the shortest during the last twenty years, being estimated at about 396,255,000 gallons against an average of 634,608,260 gallons. Hence, though the export demand continues dull, prices of ordinary wines have advanced sharply since the beginning of 1910 from $1.98 to $3.06 per hectolitre. The exceptional shortage of wine is attributed to neglect of cultivation consequent on long continuance of unremunerative prices, reduced acreage of vineyards and destruction by phylloxera and other pests. The home consumption has also been encouraged by the recent abolition of the heavy municipal tax on wine entering Spanish cities.

The American consul at Bordeaux states that the total production of wine in the Gironde district was only 72,624,471 gallons in 1909, compared with 222,384,385 gallons in 1908. Regarding the export of wines from that district he says:

"It should be of interest to California wine producers to note that the countries adjacent to the United States, as well as countries of South America that are actively engaged in the trade of the Pacific coast of the United States, purchase large quantities of table wines from this district of France. Mexico and Cuba are also heavy purchasers, the former taking nearly twice as much wine as the United States, and the latter four fifths as much wine in cask. The United States takes a very large quantity of wine from this district in bottles, a larger quantity in fact that any other country. Cuba, Mexico, Canada, Brazil, and Argentina are excellent wine markets, and the other Central and South American countries purchase in sufficient quantities to make an attractive trade."

THE PANAMA CANAL

The writer of a special article in the London Times on the effect of the opening of the Panama canal on trade with the Pacific coast, Australia and New Zealand says: "The most revolutionary change will result from the fact that California wines and fruits will be able to compete more successfully in European markets" * * * "The produce and products of California will be placed upon the European markets more quickly and more economically than at present."

THE WILD AND WOOLLY WEST.

(Dedicated to California on Her Sixtieth Birthday.)

Do you remember California, pard,
Some sixty years ago,
When she was too wild and woolly
For any use, you know?
When the coyote was the monarch
Of all that he surveyed,
Includin' all the chickens
He could catch while on a raid,
And how he got there just the same
Though we did our level best
For California then was in
The wild and woolly West.

Do you remember California, pard,
Way back in days of yore,
When every Injun with his gun
Was huntin' for our gore?
Then curdlin' warwhoops raised our hair
And times looked mighty drear
And durned if I can't hear them whoops
Still ringin' in my ear.
And filled us withunrest
For California then was in
The wild and woolly West.

Do you remember California, pard,
Way back when we were boys?
And how we did shoot up the town
And make a heap of noise?
When we took our guns to meetin'
And stayed all day and night
And the pile of grub that we destroyed
You know it was a sight.
But no matter what we tackled
We did our level best,
For California then was in
The wild and woolly West.

And when campmeetin' days came 'round
The preachers thereabout
Came flockin' down in squads galore
To knock old Satan out.
And when they struck "Amazin' Grace"
Into that tune we slid
And more amazin' than the grace
Wa the singin' that we did.
But twixt Satan and the Injins
We got but little rest
For California then was in
The wild and woolly West.

But a great change has come over, pard,
The spirit of them days,
Instead of shootin' up the town
We have quite civil ways.
And now we know when Sunday comes,
We didn't in them days,
For every day was just alike
And had the same old ways.
And then we all wore buckskin clothes
They was our Sunday best
For California then was in
The wild and woolly West.

But she's called the "land of Sunset" now,
And you bet she's up to date
And if in gettin' out the woods
We was a little late,
Yet we've made so much advancement
On the civilization plan,
That now a Californian
Looks like any other man.
And since we've got her out the woods
We'll stop and take a rest,
For now she is now longer in The wild
and woolly
West.

HIS FOOL OF A BRAIN.

There is many a man in the world,
Who the highest of honors might gain,
And never be tumbled and swirled,
But for his fool of a brain.

He could many things have at their best,
Without in the least becoming vain;
And his life might forever be blest,
But for his fool of a brain.

He might compass both land and the seas,
And visit every mountain and plane,
Have a life of luxury and ease,
But for his fool of a brain.

He might follow a pathway divine,
Stretching onward like the endless lane,
In which marvelous glories would shine,
But for his fool of a brain.

He might the truest scholarship find,
Through a wisdom both solid and sane,
Thus filling with rich treasures his mind,
But for his fool of a brain.

He might his every passion subdue,
With a virtue that never would wane,
And have a nobility most true,
But for his fool of a brain.

In short, he might in the world hold sway
With a superlative kingly reign;
And as by magic, move things his way,

HISTORICAL.

"Come, come," said Captain Kidd, approaching the center of disturbance abaft the binnacle, "we can't be all day about the thing. What's the trouble? Can't you persuade the prisoner to walk the plank?" The grizzled old bo'sun shook his head despairingly. "No, captain," he said, "he absolutely refuses to be a part of the spectacle unless we guarantee him a percentage of the moving picture rights."—From the London Globe.

MANY INDIANS AT CHURCH IN CLOVIS

Pastor Describes Scene as Twentieth Century Miracle of Grace.

Editor Republican: Many readers of the Republican who have been interested in the missionary efforts for the Auberry Indians will be glad to know that the work is showing unusual results.

Three years ago this month on a Sunday afternoon the writer went out to ranch two miles from Clovis where the Christian ranch man had gathered together a dozen or fifteen Indians. They were seated upon boxes, respectful listeners to a talk and gospel songs. There were no signs of their understanding a word or caring except as the music interested them. Those who went out to hold this meeting returned feeling the hopelessness of doing anything for the Indians under such conditions. There was, however, a conclusion reached and a determination that something intelligent and positive should be done for them.

The history of the Fresno County Indian Association and its success in getting two missionaries appointed to Auberry by the government and partly supported by the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society is well known. The Republican has told us of the buying of land by the government and the establishing of a school for the Indians. But now an added page is being written.

Again the Indians are among us working for the ranchman. Sunday, September 4th, a strange sight was witnessed, making a new page in the Indian history. About 9 o'clock in the morning a typical Indian rig was seen to drive up before the Baptist church in Clovis, and the Indian family was unloaded. At 10 o'clock over forty Indians were sitting about waiting for Sunday school to begin. As the Sunday school hour progressed they continued to come—boys, young men, women with their pappooses in their cradles, or on their backs, pig-back, one blind man being led by his little boy, a blind woman brought by her sister, until seventy-six Indians, beside pappooses, were seated in the body of the house. How clean they looked and how bright were many faces. We were attracted especially by the fine faces of many of the young men. Brother Jackson teaches this class the Sunday school lesson, Bill Sherman interpreting.

What a strange congregation to greet a minister when the preaching hour arrives. The writer gives them an illustrated talk on God's love. Bill Sherman, six feet two inches, stands besides him and in a strong unhesitating voice and noble manner, interprets the words to his people. Prayer is offered and all heads are bowed reverently. They sing together "Jesus Loves Me, This I Know," and many faces show clearly the presence of God's spirit in their hearts. We say, "See what God hath wrought." The twentieth century is a little wise for miracles, but here is a miracle of grace before our eyes, in this wonderful evidence of the power of the Holy Spirit.

VISALIA RECLUSE KILLS SELF WITH HOME-MADE GUN

G. Langford Ends Suffering From Cancer; Leaves Original Cookbook.

Main Street to Be Lighted With 40 Electroliers; W. C. Long Dies.

VISALIA, Sept. 10—George Langford, an eccentric character of Farmersville, committed suicide this morning by shooting himself in the head with a self-made 22-caliber revolver. The small bullet did not cause instant death and Langford lingered about two hours. The shooting took place while the man was still in bed at 8:30. Neighbors, hearing the report, investigated to find him upon his cot with blood over his face. The bullet entered near the eye.

Langford, who was about 60 years of age, was suffering with cancer of the stomach. He recently visited several physicians, including two Chinese doctors, and was told that they could do nothing for him. He had several times threatened his life.

He had been a resident of Farmersville about two months, making his home alone in a small cabin across the street from the store. He was peculiar in his eating and had invented numerous new dishes. He possessed a cook book containing his own recipes. He was also said to be of a peculiarly religious turn.

A wife and child reside in the East. He leaves city lots in Porterville, the value of which are not known. While leaving no will, he has expressed a desire that the property go to sisters residing in the East.

Deputy Coroner T. A. Elliott held an inquest this morning, the jury returning a verdict of death from suicide.

The idea of lighting Main street by means of electroliers has struck a popular chord and it looks as though the plan would be carried through with a rush. A dozen standards were pledged today, contingent upon a general installation, including two near the First National bank, two at the new city hall and others along Main street. It is desired to install forty on Main street alone, one on each corner and two on each side of the street in the middle of the block. The merchants are asked to provide the standards and lights, to cost about $100 each, after which the city will pay for the current on an all-night schedule. The electroliers, if installed, will take the place of the arcs in the main business section.

William C. Long died this morning at his home at 441 South Bridge street after a long illness. He was a native of Texas, 33 years of age. The funeral will be held Monday morning under the auspices of Visalia lodge of Masons, the deceased having been a member of a Texas lodge. The interment will be in the city cemetery. The deceased leaves a father and several brothers and sisters residing in this city.

M. J. Rowe and son, Allison, returned this morning from San Francisco where they attended the Admission Day celebration.

H. Bucksbaum, deputy county clerk, has gone to San Francisco on an outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Eward are home from an outing spent in Giant Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Todd of Independence, Kansas, are guests of relatives in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Robertson returned this morning from a honeymoon outing in the southern part of the state.

An auto frightened a horse driven by Mrs. Fred Van Loan of Farmersville this afternoon, she being accompanied by a daughter, and both were thrown out, neither being seriously hurt.

C. Hausch, a retired rancher of this city, was standing on the street when an express team, becoming frightened at the runaway, started to run. Mr. Hausch was knocked down, two wheels passing over him. He was taken to a physician's office. It is thought he is not badly hurt.

LAUNDRY "STRIKE" ONLY UNION OFFICIOUSNESS AFFIRMS EGAN

Proprietor of Fresno Steam Establishment, Says He Observed Contract.

No strike exists at the Fresno Steam Laundry, stated Proprietor J. H. Egan of that establishment yesterday. The declaration calling the strike of the union employes there yesterday was an officious action of the Fresno Labor Council, the central body of the unions, and caused even greater surprise to his employes than it did to himself, he affirmed. The announcement of the call for a strike was made by Secretary Tom C. Seward of the Council, following the regular meeting of that body Friday evening, and was coupled with a series of resolutions passed by the Council placing the laundry on the unfair list for Egan's alleged action in forcing his employes to work on Labor Day instead of letting them take part in the parade. The central body claimed that several clauses were violated by Egan, who replies that his employes are satisfied and that the body tried to foist a strike on them without the knowledge or consent of the Laundry Workers' local.

"The statement of the Labor Council in the morning's paper came as more of a surprise to the workers than it did to myself," stated Egan yesterday. "I have had no trouble with the employes, and I have not seen a representative of the unions for the last six months.

"The working on Labor Day was not in violation of the agreement with the unions. In accordance with the agreement I paid my employe's time and a half on a basis of overtime for the holiday, and even allowed them time to either see or take part in the Labor Day parade.

"This strike, if there be one, seems to reverse the usual order of things. Instead of the Laundry Workers' local calling a strike in the first place, the initiative is taken by the central body without consulting them. As far as I know, there was no complaint from the workers.

"I had a perfect right to run the laundry on Labor Day, and did not violate any agreement by so doing. Even so I had only about a quarter of the full number of employes working, and the work done was only that of the restaurants and hotels, and this had to be done."

WATCH POSLAM WORK

Results Are Seen After a Single Application.

Anyone wishing to test poslam, the new skin remedy, for the rapidity of its action should select a red spot or small part of a surface where the skin is extensively broken out. Poslam should be applied on the place at night and results noted in the morning by comparison with the surrounding skin, which has not been treated. Surprising results are seen, particularly when poslam is used for red and inflamed noses, fever blisters, pimples, rash, scaly scalp, itching feet, sunburn, etc. The beneficial action of this new healing agent in eczema, acne, psoriasis, barber's itch, piles, etc., begins with first application when all itching is stopped, and continues unremittingly until its work is done. Cases of these troubles, of years' standing, have been completely eradicated by poslam after other remedies were abandoned as ineffectual.

A special 50-cent package of poslam is prepared for minor uses and this, as well as the regular $2 jar, is on sale at all druggists, particularly Geo. H. Monroe & Co.

A sample of poslam, which will afford a convincing test, will be sent by mail, free of charge, to any one who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York city.

CATARRH

A SYSTEMIC BLOOD DISEASE

Catarrh is not merely an affection of the mucous membranes; it is a deep-seated blood disease in which the entire circulation and greater part of the system are involved. It is more commonly manifested in the head, nose and throat, because of the sensitive nature of these membranes, and also because they are more easily reached by irritating influences from the outside. The symptoms of Catarrh, such as a tight feeling in the head, nose stopped up, throat clogged and dry, hacking cough, etc., show that the tiny blood vessels of the mucous membranes are badly congested and inflamed from the impurities in the circulation. To cure Catarrh permanently the blood must be purified and the system cleansed of all unhealthy matter. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head, goes down to the bottom of the trouble and makes a complete and lasting cure by PURIFYING the blood. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, the head is cleared, breathing becomes natural and easy, the throat is no longer clogged, and every unpleasant symptom of the disease disappears. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and for this reason is the most certain cure for Catarrh. Book on Catarrh and medical advice free to all who write.

THE PLATFORM

The platform adopted by the California Republicans has attracted universal attention, not merely in California, but throughout the East. It was telegraphed East verbatim over the Associated Press wires, and was printed in full in most of the larger Eastern newspapers. The general comment is that it has "set the pace" for the makers of state platforms everywhere.

These platforms have been going through an evolution. The traditional platform has been mere party flub-dub. Essentially, it had only two features—endorsement of all the party office holders now in office, and an appeal to vote for all the party candidates now running, especially those least fit to be elected. Incidentally, there was guff to appeal to the prejudices of various blocks of voters. With the coming of the direct primary, guff became unfashionable, and two sorts of platforms took its place—a mere schedule of promised legislation, put out not by a convention, but by the legislative candidates, and state platforms discussing national issues, as in the Indiana, Iowa and Kansas platforms. Now comes the California platform, which, without the guff, discusses the issues, and aligns itself nationally, and then proceeds to outline a program of constructive state legislation. It is a new model of platform building which is likely to have many followers.

The platform is Republican—Republican in its allegiance and historic appeal, Republican in its tariff doctrine, and Republican in the practical constructiveness of its concrete proposals. Some of its planks the Democratic platform has also. But it will be found that the principle of selection in the Democratic platform is availability to entice votes, while the principle of selection in the Republican platform is importance to actual reform.

It was a great victory to nominate the Progressive candidates at the primaries. It will be a greater to elect them at the polls. But the greatest will be the enactment into law of the Progressive measures recommended by the Republican convention. That will transform the whole problem of self-government in California.

APPLAUSE

There was an interesting study in applause at Theodore Bell's "key-note" meeting in San Francisco.

The chairman made the usual speech for "the ticket," lining out the various names, so that each might get "a hand" —which of course they got. But the applause in most cases was absolutely perfunctory; merely a matter of well-drilled habit. The only exceptions were in the cases of those Democratic candidates who have real personal strength irrespective of their place on the ticket.

The big applause was for Judge Lawlor, the graft prosecution judge, who is now nominee for the Supreme court. The applause for Judge Lawlor was quick, spontaneous and very hearty and genuine. Next in rank was Walter Macarthur, who received applause equally genuine but not so strong. Third was Judge Cabaniss, who has been endorsed in San Francisco by the Good Government League. His applause was light, but spontaneous and genuine. All the rest was perfunctory to the last degree.

Bell himself was of course applauded, and the strong points of his speech were well received. But the only real explosive applause came when he paid a tribute to Johnson at the end. Then you would have thought the roof would come off. A straw ballot of Bell's own audience would unquestionably have shown a majority for Johnson.

KEEP THEM OUT

Johnny Mackenzie is being repudiated everywhere. Both party conventions adopted resolutions contrary to the pro-Oriental report of his labor commission, and now the State Senate has unanimously adopted a resolution expressly repudiating that report. Evidently there is no difference of reasonable public opinion in California. It is all against Oriental labor.

The Hindu influx seems to have stirred up even the slow-moving government departments to some activities for our protection. Whatever may be debated about other immigration, opposition to the Hindus is unanimous. They of all peoples on earth are the most absolutely unadapted to living anywhere except in their own country. So every subterfuge of the immigration law is to be used to keep them out.

Unfortunately some of these subterfuges will work hardship elsewhere if literally applied. For instance, one ... passage is paid by some friend ... relative in this country is to be deported as a contract laborer. That is all very well as to Hindus, whom nobody wants, anyway, whether they pay their own passage or not. But in the case of desirable immigrants, it seems foolish to enforce such a rule. Who cares, for instance, whether a Danish immigrant earned his own fare, in Denmark, or had it earned for him by his brother who had come first to America? The immigrant is so desirable, either way, that our only concern is to let him in as easily as possible, and then encourage him to stay. For that matter, we should not object to the whole population of Denmark moving over, including the lame, the halt, the blind and the criminals. But we want none of the Hindu population, not even the best of it. For the one population is our own sort of people; the other is another sort of people. We are good, bad and indifferent ourselves, and we welcome the good, bad and indifferent members of any other nation of our own sort of people. But of the non-assimilable sort, we want none at all. This is the voice of California; Guardian of the Gate. Labor Commissioner Mackenzie falsified that voice. Now even his own voice is not heard.

Can't somebody insult Mike de Young outrageously enough to anger him into bringing the Chronicle out openly for Hell? It would be a God's blessing to get rid of its false pretense of supporting Johnson, and to see it honestly out in the open, for once.

BITTER CONTEST IN MAINE ELECTION

Two Congressmen Must Fight Hard for Their Seats.

PORTLAND, Maine, Sept. 10.—A question mark symbolizes the political situation in Maine at the close of the state campaign tonight. For weeks both parties have engaged in efforts to arouse the state and the final rallies were held tonight with both sides expressing confidence.

The rival candidates are the present governor, Bert E. Fernald, leading the Republicans, and Frederick W. Plaisted, mayor of Augusta, heading the Democratic ticket. Besides choosing between these heads of the tickets on Monday, the voters of the state also will elect four state auditors, four congressmen, county officers and a legislature which will name a successor to U. S. Senator Eugene Hale.

While the contest for governor is first in interest, it has no great margin over that for Congress in two of the districts. For the first time in years Republican leaders have been called upon to fight stiffly in the First and Second districts, which gave Reed and Dingley overwhelming majorities election after election.

SAN JOSE FIRE CHIEF KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—Richard Brown, chief of the San Jose fire department, was killed early tonight by the overturning of an automobile near the Tanforan race track. He was returning home from this city in company with Ivan Treadwell, who escaped injury.

The car was going at a fast rate when it skidded at a sharp turn in the road and was upset, Chief Brown being buried under the wreck. The body was taken to the office of the coroner at South San Francisco and will be sent to San Jose.

SAN JOSE, Sept. 10.—Undertakers left this morning for South San Francisco to bring the body of Fire Chief Brown to this city. Chief Brown resided at 43 South Crittenden street; his wife survives him but he had no children. He also leaves a brother here, two sisters and his father, W. D. Brown, who years ago was a chief of police and fire chief here for several years, and who is now a shotgun messenger for Wells Fargo, with his residence in San Francisco.

Brown had been fire chief for a number of terms, and his efficiency as an officer was well known throughout the state. He was a native of San Jose and was aged 35 years.

AUTHORITIES WATCH FOR RUNAWAY LEPER

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.— Health authorities inspected the passengers on every train arriving from the West seeking John Kekas, a Greek leper who broke quarantine Wednesday in Salt Lake and is thought to be making his way East. Inspectors also watched all departing trains, but found no trace of the diseased man. Pullman officials, however, believed the leper escaped the vigilance of the Chicago officials and slipped through this city during the day and is now on his way to New York.

MEXICO BRILLIANTLY LIGHTED FOR FETE

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 10.—The first full week of the centennial ended tonight in a blaze of light, the power having been turned on at dusk and for the first time lighting thousands of electric bulbs strung across streets and parks. San Francisco avenue, the chief business thoroughfare of the city, was especially splendid in its illuminations. Enormous set pieces adorned the tops of buildings, presenting figures typifying liberty, while all portions of the surrounding edifices were outlined in fire.

PROGRESSIVE NAMED BY MISSOURI REPUBLICANS

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 10.—The Republican congressional committee of the fourth district today selected W. K. Amick, a lawyer of St. Joseph, as a candidate for Congress. Mr. Amick has announced that he is a Progressive.

GETS SIBLEY'S PLACE.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Sept. 10.—Peter N. Speer of Oil City, was chosen today as Republican nominee for Congress in the twenty-eighth district, vice Joseph G. Sibley, resigned. The choice was made in a meeting of Republican conferees.

TRINITY CHURCH HAS TORN DOWN TENEMENTS

Rich Corporation Will Hereafter Invest Onl yin Business Blocks.

NEW YORK, Sept 10.—Trinity Church Corporation, once accused of owning the worst tenements of the city, although it is admittedly the richest church in America and one of the richest in the world, announced in a statement just issued that in the last eighteen months it has razed 154 tenements, causing 2295 persons to seek new homes

Henceforth Trinity will permit no more tenements or apartment houses, but business houses only. The changes already effected cost $5,000,000 and are working a marked change in the character of the lower West Side, where most of the Trinity holdings lie.

SUICIDES RATHER THAN UNDERGO AN OPERATION

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—S. S. Innes, head of the firm of Drake, Innes & Company, of Charleston, S. C., wholesale and retail shoe dealers, shot and killed himself in his room in the Hoffman House early today. The merchant was discovered lying in bed with a bullet wound in the side of his head. A revolver lay near by.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Mr. Innes came here with his brother from Charleston to undergo an ordinary examination for what is said to be a minor affection. The merchant left no word to indicate the reason for his act, but his brother thinks he worried over the examination which he was to undergo. He was 59 years old. His body will be taken to Charleston.

HELD ON CHARGE OF LIBELING WILLIAMS

TUCSON, Ariz., Sept. 10.—F. H. Blighton, editor of "Voice of the People," was today held to the grand jury on two charges of criminally libeling James T. Williams, Jr., proprietor of the Tucson Citizen. Two bonds were fixed in the amounts of $2500 and $1500. The alleged libel consisted in publishing "that during a recent trip to the East, Williams, who is a former civil service commissioner, traveled on Southern Pacific transportation charged to advertising account." It was during this trip that some gossip resulted from a visit to Oyster Bay where Williams was met by Miss Ethel Roosevelt.

SUICIDE IS FOUND IN ORCHARD NEAR STANFORD

PALO ALTO, Sept. 10.—The body of Albert Lund, a young lumberman of a prominent family, was found in an orchard adjoining the old Stanford mansion today with a gaping bullet wound in the head. The revolver with which he had committed suicide was found by Lund's side but there was no note explaining his reasons for taking his life.

Lund was 25 years of age. He left home September 9 and his unusual absence caused the search that resulted in the finding of his body.

PAYNE MUST FIGHT FOR HIS SEAT

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—According to a special dispatch to the World, dated Auburn, N. Y., Sereno E. Payne, chairman of the ways and means committee in the national House and father of the Payne tariff bill, has a stiff fight on his hands for renomination to Congress. His opponent will be former Mayor Clarence E. Aiken of Auburn, who today announced his candidacy.

Aiken is a lawyer and well known after dinner speaker. He is said to favor downward revision of the tariff.

THE ARIZONA ROAD RUNNER

Why No One Would Think of Killing This Sociable Bird of the Desert

Eastern readers are likely to be puzzled by the dispatch from Douglas printed in yesterday's Republican descriptive of the initial failure of an aeroplane from which great things are expected down Douglas way. It was stated that "the aeroplane ran over the ground like a yellow road runner, but refused to fly." Outside of Arizona the inquiry will naturally be "What is a road runner."

The road runner is one of Arizona's distinctive ornithological institutions. It is a long legged, long billed bird, slender of build and standing some ten inches high. It is not often seen in the farming districts but is a familiar sight in the desert.

It has gained the name of road runner from its habit of taking the road in front of travelers, be they on horseback or wheeled conveyance, and running swiftly or slowly as occasion requires, showing off its neighborly spirit and running qualities. It is not uncommon for it to keep in company with the traveler for several hundred yards.

No resident of Arizona would kill a road runner. It is firmly believed that the bird is the deadly enemy of that monster of the desert, the rattlesnake. We don't know whether any of our readers ever saw a road runner kill a rattlesnake; if there is an authentic story of such a thing we would be glad to publish it. But the accepted tradition is that the road runner and the rattlesnake are deadly enemies and that the rattlesnake fears the road runner beyond anything else.

It is told that the bird drives the snake into a coil and then darting around the serpent like lightning pecks it to death. Whatever truth there may be in the stories of the road runner's accomplishments as a disciple of St. Patrick it deserves the friendly protection it receives—its quaint sociability is always a diversion for the lonesome desert traveler.—Arizona Republican.

BUSINESS WORLD IS BECOMING WEARY OF THE ANNUAL SPECIAL EDITION HOLD-UP

There are indications that the annual newspaper fake, peculiar to Los Angeles of issuing a so-called "Mid-Winter edition" has begun its pernicious activity in holding up the merchants and business men of this city.

Under the guise of advertising the attractions of Los Angeles, the management of the Times, as the originator of the hold-up, and the examiner as an imitator, begin at this season a round of visits to every interest that will stand for the project, and make demands for paid matter to accompany the hundreds of columns of "slop" alleged to be beneficial to Southern California.

The Times is the principal offender in this fake proposition, because its demands are more insistent, open and undisguised; its calls upon every line of business pernicious and insolent.

The fake is an old, back-number style of thimble-rigging that long since has been driven from even country journalism. It has no part, particularly, in a city which has risen to the position of a metropolis and is aspiring to be considered in advance and modern in all its methods.

There is nothing that has so prejudicial an effect upon any city as support of "mid-winter editions" and "annual reviews" by newspapers that profess to be modern, but which stoop instead to an out-of-date hold-up known to be such in even the remote fastnesses of the backwoods.

The "mid-winter" edition in Los Angeles has come to be a source of humiliation to every man who loves his city and looks for its expansion into the million class. It is simply a bundle of almanac matter, clipped bodily from previous editions, set in circus-poster illuminations that are cheap, raudy and sometimes nasty. The edition is nearly less than half the number promised—for which everybody is grateful—and finds its way chiefly into sewers and backyard bonfire.

Merchants all know the hurtful character of this sort of "literature." No friend of Los Angeles buys it or sends it away. A few are caught by the liberal display of red and yellow ink and fancy it may catch some Eastern reader and persuade him to come to a red and yellow city, where alleged journalism is so far behind the times as to be a curiosity.

Annually the merchants have yielded to the unfair pressure of the "mid-winter edition," but they are becoming disgusted with it. They have hoped every year that this would be the last—that the rural management of the Times would some day come to realize the out-of-date character of its proceedings and quit the game voluntarily. But they are losing without hope. The red and yellow ink supply holds out and will continue to hold out as long as a merchant is left to submit to the demand on him.

A change is coming, however. The merchants are beginning to consolidate against the annual holdup, and are now protesting they will no longer "chip in for charity" to an institution which fattens upon the patriotism and good nature of as fine a body of business men as ever helped to creat a great city.

The "mid-winter edition" is a disgusting, humiliating, nauseating thing and should at once go, with all the other slimy wastes, the way of the mutfall.—Los Angeles Express.

order, and it is especially to the interest of the wage workers that law and order should be established and they should be the first to join effectively in the movement. No plea should be entertained for a moment that would delay the putting of an end to the regulation of lawless violence.

"Let the employes remember that it may well be to the interest of some of their leaders for political or other reasons to have lawlessness and disorder continue, but that it is pre-eminently against the interest of the workingmen themselves.

THEN JUSTICE.

"Then your duty has not ended. It has only begun. Then you will have obtained law and order, but you are derelict to your duty unless you treat this merely as the first although a necessary and all-important step in obtdining justice. In any big strike not only the employes and employers are particularly interested, but the public is too. Especially is this the case with public corporations.

"It is not merely your duty but your right, you people of Columbus, you people of Ohio, to insist on knowing all the facts that led up to and brought on this strike and pass judgment on it.

"It has been alleged to me that the trouble began because of a dismissal by the company of some of its employes for asking for higher wages. It is also alleged that it has continued because of the open or covert effort of the corporation to prevent the formation of a union among the employes. Both allegations are denied. You should get authoritative information as to whether they are false or true.

"Of course, to dismiss men for asking for an increase of wages would be such an infamy that I can hardly believe it occurred, but you should find out definitely.

UNIONS NECESSARY.

"To dismiss men for membership in or for proposing to join a union would be almost as bad. The union is just as much a necessity of our modern industrial system as the corporation itself. Both must obey the law, but each is a necessity. Under modern conditions it is oftentimes necessary that there should be collective bargaining on the part of the men and this can only come through the union.

"I am an honorary member of a union myself. If I were a wage worker engaged in manual labor, I should certainly join the union. Union men have no right to force other wage-workers into the union. As was so well set forth in the admirable report of the anthracite strike commission, such action is as gross a violation of right as is the so-called 'secondary boycott.

"But is is equally an outrage for the employer to discriminate against the unions and to fail to work with them in a spirit of cordial good faith on both sides. Moreover, if your present arbitation law is not sufficiently stringent, make it more stringent, and if it is unconstitutional, amend the constitution. But do not wait to remedy any present wrongs until the constitution is amended.

"The state and them unicipality have power to force any public service corporation to do what is right if they choose to exercise that power, and it is the business of the people to see that they so choose.

PUBLIC DUTY.

"In conclusion, friends, your duties are twofold. First, at once and without equivocation and hesitation to enforce order, suppress violence and see that the law is obeyed in letter and spirit. Second, as soon as this result has been achieved, turn at once to the great question of justice and exert your whole power to find out the facts, treating any refusal to give you all the facts as a confession of guilt. If injustice has been done, exert the whole power of the government to see that it is remedied forthwith and if there is any effort to prevent and if the attempt to remedy is obstructed, see to it that there is not only a remedy, but punishment and take steps that will effectually prevent a repetition of the injustice.

"You people of Columbus face one of the crises which from time to time in our American life demand the exercise of the highest qualities of good citizenship. It is your immediate duty to secure law and order, and once this has been done, it becomes your even higher and more pressing duty to see that justice, full and complete, is guaranteed alike to the employer, the employes and the people as a whole."

WILDLY CHEERED.

On his arrival at the park Colonel Roosevelt was introduced to Mayor Marshall, whose handling of the carmen's strike here has been criticized in certain quarters. When the two men shook hands there was loud cheering.

The crowd, estimated at between 15,000 to 20,000, wildly cheered him when Roosevelt declared that lawlessness should be crushed and that he would join a union if he were a wage earner. The crowd cheered also when he declared that a policeman who mutinied (thirty-three of them having mutinied in Columbus during the strike), stood on a lower level than that of the professional law breakers. The audience was made up largely of workmen from the shops and scores of the union street car strikers.

The colonel was taken to the union station after his speech and left for Pittsburg.

Mayor Marshall, after hearing Colonel Roosevelt's speech said:

"If his words of wisdom are heeded this strike will end at once. Peace and good order are now being maintained in this city and this is the time to compel arbitration. A special session of the legislature should be called at once to enact a compulsory arbitration law. In the meantime the people of Columbus should express themselves in no uncertain terms."

WEATHER CONDITIONS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—Forecast: San Joaquin valley: Fair Sunday; light north wind.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

Fair weather has prevailed during the last 24 hours over practically the entire country, the unusual feature of this morning's map being the very small area over which rain has fallen. It has occurred only in North Carolina, the mountains of Tennessee, and on the west Gulf coast. A 24 hour fall of 1.04 inches is reported from Galveston. A trough of low pressure stretching from Saskatchewan southwestward across the Rocky mountains and plateau to the valley of the Colorado is causing warmer weather over those sections, the Dakotas and upper Mississippi valley. It is cooler this morning in the Ohio and middle and lower Mississippi valleys and on the middle Atlantic coast. Elsewhere the changes have not been important.

An area of high barometric pressure on the north Pacific coast assures fair weather for Fresno and vicinity during the next thirty-six hours.

Meeting to Be Held at Armory Hall Instead of Einstein's.

Chester H. Rowell and J. P. Bernhard to Deliver Principal Addresses.

Owing to a misunderstanding regarding dates, it will be impossible for the Young Men's Republican Club to meet at Einstein hall Monday night and the meeting will be held instead at Armory hall. This hall has been secured for the occasion.

A rousing meeting to mark the real opening of the campaign will be held on that night and elaborate preparations have been made to make it a complete success. Republicans in general are planning to attend at that time and the club extends a hearty welcome to all, old and young alike.

Chester H. Rowell and Joseph P. Bernhard will be the speakers of the evening and in addition to these addresses a splendid program of music and novelties will be given.

Otis Turner, Fresno's own minstrel, will favor the audiences with several songs of his own selection. Homer Reddick will give an exhibition of club swinging and Lucien Wharton will give a vocal solo of his own selection.

Sumner Glasgow will favor the club members and their friends with several piano selections of popular pieces. Kellogg and Shaw will complete the evening's entertainment with a comedy sketch.

Interest in the club has been aroused to a keen pitch and from all indications this organization promises to be one of the largest Republican organizations ever organized in this county to assist in carrying on a campaign.

MALAGA SHIPMENTS FOR 2 WEEKS MORE

Shipment of malaga table grapes will continue from this section for about two weeks more, according to the statements of shippers. The shipments have been rather light for a week or so past, owing to scarcity of field help, but are expected to be somewhat brisker until the close of the season now, as some help from muscat fields is again available.

Prices on the malagas have continued to run at a good level through the whole of the season, falling rapidly from prices at the opening to $1100 and $1200 a car, and staying there. Money can be made in good quantities at these figures.

Z. Hernandez, the Mexican arrested by Constable McSwain on a charge of grand larceny, was released from jail yesterday on an order from Judge Briggs. AGENCY AGREES TO SELL RAISINS AT PRESENT MARKET PRICES

Contract Holders Satisfied and Restraining Order Is Dissolved.

H. V. Rudy Makes Statement Regarding Situation at Present Time.

Upon the statement of the officers of the California Dried Fruit Agency that they had rescinded the sale of 500 tons of raisins to Fred Dow for 2 1-4 cents, and that they would endeavor to sell the goods at the present market price, attorneys for the contract holders in the Dried Fruit Agency, who recently brought suit to restrain the agency from selling the goods to Dow, informed Judge Church in the superior court yesterday that they were satisfied with the declaration of the agency officers and the temporary injunction against these people was dissolved by the court.

Immediately after the suit to enjoin the agency from selling these goods for 2 1-4 cents was filed, H. V. Rudy, president of the agency, went to the office of George Cosgrave and informed him that he would be willing to have the members sell the goods themselves if they could get a better price. His offer was taken up and an offer of 3 cents for the muscats was secured by the members. Rudy refused to confirm the sale, however, after the offer had been made.

It was asserted yesterday that the goods cannot now be sold for 3 cents. One prominent grower went to the California Fruit Canners' Association yesterday and offered his 1909 crop to them for 3 cents. The Association turned it down, stating that old crop raisins are not now worth that price.

The following communication was submitted yesterday by H. V. Rudy, relative to the situation as it now stands:

Editor Republican:—The California Dried Fruit Agency through the columns of this paper wishes to explain to the growers, and to all interested, the real situation in regard to the recent newspaper articles which have appeared in reference to the sale of their crop of 1909 raisins.

A suit was filed recently asking for a restraining order, which temporary order was issued and made returnable Saturday morning and heard before Judge Church, and after hearing a full, fair statement of the entire matter, the judge very promptly dissolved the temporary injunction.

While this suit was pending, and before the termination of the application for a restraining order, statements have been published in reference to the situation, and the agency desires in this matter to correct some false impressions that have gone forth in reference thereto.

A great many of our growers are familiar with the situation; but for fear some of the growers have been misled by these reports, we have made up our minds to submit this statement with the request that any who wish further particulars in regard to the matter, we will be glad to personally go over the same with them.

Under the contracts which the growers signed with this company, the time for settlement was fixed for the first day of September, 1910, for the crop of the previous year.

The agency felt satisfied that the price of raisins would advance toward the close of the year, and with that idea in view held about five or six hundred tons of raisins, and desired to hold them until just before the new crop came in; in order to post all of the growers of the exact situation, a letter was sent out by the agency about the middle of August, setting forth th fact in substance that the agency had on hand a block of raisins unsold; that the price was advancing, and it was the belief of the agency that it would continue to advance, and by deferring the settlement until the first of September, probably by the first of October a price in excess of the price at that time could be secured.

The growers were requested to communicate with the agency, and express their views, it having been always the policy of this agency to make the same a growers' agency, pure and simple, and allow as far as practicable all of the growers to not only participate in the profits, but to participate in the control of the company, by allowing suggestions to be made in regard to the same.

These letters were received by the growers, and suggestions therein contained approved by a majority of the growers, but from the fact that a number of them wrote to the agency requesting a settlement by the first of September, it was determined by the board of directors of the agency to sell the entire block of goods, and thus accommodate all growers.

On the 27th day of August a sale was made to Fred Dow, at a price which averaged 2 1-4 cents. At that time that price was the market price of goods of like kind and quality similarly situated; however, the board of directors, verily believing that the price would advance, and after discussion, determined that they would not effect this sale without securing an option upon the goods, so that if the price did advance above that, they would still be able to make additional money for the grower.

The option was hence secured from Mr. Dow to purchase these goods at an advance of one dollar ($1.00) per ton; after the sale and on the last day of September, an action was brought to enjoin the sale to Mr. Dow. We appreciate now under what circumstances the same was brought; it was not known to all that this option was taken back by the parties who were responsible for the suit being brought, but as a matter of fact the directors had protected the grower by taking back this option, so that if the price did advance the grower could receive the benefit of it; the directors had also tried to please and accommodate the growers who were opposed to selling while the price was advancing, and also those who insisted on a settlement by September 1st, some of these growers wished to sell so as to settle by September 1st, we sold at the highest obtainable price at that time, and then after we had done what some of the growers desired, we were sued for it, claiming that the price was unsatisfactory. But by taking back the option we placed ourselves where none could complain when they knew all the facts. Everything pertaining to the sale to Mr. Dow and the option back was all reduced to writing, done by a portion of the directors of said agency, and with the approval of all of the directors, and furthermore the option taken back directly in the name of the agency, and not in the name of any individual, and further the same appearing upon the books of the agency as being made for the benefit of the growers, with all of these circumstances surrounding the transaction, the same could not in anywise be questioned.

After the suit was brought, a request was made from the attorney who brought the suit for an option upon these goods; the directors concluded to give such option, and with the approval of the agency, Mr. Dow executed the option, which provided for one-half cent advanced on the purchase price. Before the option expired the price of raisins had still further advanced; the option was not taken up by the attorney for the plaintiff in the action.

In the meantime the agency had received orders and offers for the crop sufficient in price to justify assuring the growers of an advance above the price in the option given by Mr. Dow to the agency, and hence exercised its option to repurchase, and the agency now owns the raisins.

All the facts and circumstances pertaining to the matter was made to appear at the hearing in court; it was so made to appear by affidavit; all restraining orders upon the agency were removed, and it is believed by the directors of the agency that a price will be realized for these goods in excess of the amount for which the option was given to the attorney who brought the suit for the plaintiff.

Although this suit has had the effect of forcing the agency to turn down some good offers for portions of the block, still as the market now appears the price realised will show to the growers the advantage of the policy adopted by the agency. Much of the recent differences have arisen by the growers not being familiar with all of the circumstances. All that we ask of the growers, if matters arise that they do not understand, to come to us. Our books are open. We have nothing to conceal. Mistakes in judgment may have been made, but we can say that at all times we have made the interests of the growers our interests.

IRVING BRISTOL ARRIVES IN FIGHTING TRIM FOR LOCAL OPTION

Wine Men Seek to Create Social and Political Domination.

Declares American People Are Against Rule of Special Interests.

Irving Bristol, of the Anti-Saloon League, registered at the Hughes hotel last night. He will address a union meeting at the Baptist church at Del Rey this morning.

In referring to the hearing which the supervisors have announced they will hold upon the proposed local option ordinance next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Mr. Bristol said: "For more than three years the temperance people of Fresno county have been asking for a local option ordinance which would give the people the power to protect their neighborhood from objectionable saloons, but the supervisors have refused this American right. It is true that at the last pleading of the anti-saloon people Messrs. Martin, Mitchell and Huffman declared themselves for local option, while Messrs. Jorgenson and Johnson smiled and were non-committal.

"The ordinance which was submitted at that time was not presented with the request that it be passed, but that it be used as a working basis for a majority rule ordinance for townships.

"The wine growers in taking up this saloon fight have sought to create social and political domination by special interests and deprive the people of a fundamental American principle, of government 'of the people, by the people and for the people.' The American people are against rule by special interests whether by railroads, Standard Oil, federated liquor trade, or any other, and the opposition by the wine interests to local option puts them in the class of money combines which seek to take unfair advantage of the people. The poorest voter should have as much power to express his opinion upon a question which affects the public as the richest land owner."

FAITH CIRCLE HOLDS INTERESTING SOCIAL

The Faith Circle of the Christian church met Friday evening in the church parlors for a business session and a social evening. Miss Bessie Preston read an interesting paper on the Passion Play and the paper was followed by a general discussion on the subject. Vacation reminiscences were the topic of much conversation among the members at the close of the evening.

Dainty refreshments of ices and cakes were served by the social committee.

Among those present at the meeting were Mrs. A. C. Swartz, Mrs. M. K. Harris, Bertha Cressmer, Hattie Janes, Mrs. Janes, Ila Elliott, Mable Thornburg, Mable and Jeanette Minard, Bessie and Cleo Preston, Naomi and Reba Green, Flora Ebby, Jennie Tyree and Violet March.

OIL TOWN COWBOY ROBBED BY "FRIEND"

Frank Arlington, a Bakersfield cowboy, reported to the police yesterday that he had been robbed of a purse containing $18.60, a pair of silver spurs and a lariat. The thief left 25 cents in Arlington's pockets, so that he might get breakfast. The robbery occurred Friday night while Arlington was rooming with a man who gave his name as Frank L. Smith. The police are now looking for Smith. Arlington swore to a warrant for the arrest of Smith on a charge of petit larceny.

INVADING COYOTE KILLED AT CLOVIS

Friday evening at about 8:30 o'clock an unusually large and daring coyote came into the yard not thirty yards from the house of A. M. Knight, near Clovis. It was attacked by the bulldog "Jack," owned by Mr. Knight's son, and after about a four minutes' struggle the coyote was killed. The dog received scarcely a scratch.

PATRICK TALENT PASSES AWAY IN HANFORD OF LONG ILLNESS

Funeral to be Held Monday; Remains to Be Shipped to Los Angeles.

Hanford Wages War on Pool Rooms Allowing Boys to Play.

HANFORD, Sept. 10.—Patrick Talent, the well known pioneer and vineyardist, passed away at his home in this city today after an illness of a few months' duration.

The deceased was one of the foremost Democrats of this section and at all times took a firm stand for the principles both local and national, advocated by his party. He came to Hanford some years ago from Butte, Mont., where he was prominent as a member of the bar. Of late years he was associated with D. R. Cameron and others in the Silver Bow vineyard, one of the largest and best conducted vineyards in Kings county.

The funeral will be held at the family residence Monday, September 12, 1910, and it is understood will be private. The remains will be shipped to Los Angeles for interment.

Among other business transacted by the supervisors today was the awarding of the bridge over the Blakely ditch, to John Anderson for $1,075. G. W. Davis' bid was identical as to the amount with that of Anderson.

Humane Officer A. L. Calhoun is putting down the clamp on the proprietors of pool halls in this city, who allow minors to play pool in their resorts, in direct violation of the city ordinance. If the offense is repeated, arrests and revocations of license will follow.

Word from the state fair says that M. Bassett of Kings county had carried off all the prizes and all but one second with his exhibit of Poland China hogs.

All but seven of the Kings county schools will open on Monday, September 12. Those who have postponed opening until September 19 are: Avenal, Empire, Stratton, Jacobs, Mussel Slough, Eureka and Lemoore.

Ruben Georges Wentberg, aged 84 years, passed away at his home in this city last evening. Rev. Akman conducted the funeral service in Hanford today. The remains will be shipped to Three Rivers, Mich., for interment. A son, D. W. Weinberg, will accompany the body.

Are there any REALLY PERFECT Diamonds?

Certainly! Plenty of them. Not so many as of the other kind, to be sure, but enough to go around for all those who really want them.

O yes, it's true some diamond merchants say there is no such thing as an absolutely perfect diamond, but that is because they sell cheaper stones.

To begin with, only five per cent of all diamonds mined will make perfect stones as large as 1-2 carat or larger after cutting. Naturally they are the most expensive.

Then most of this five per cent come to America in the rough to be cut here. That leaves few perfect stones to be cut in Europe. That is the way of it.

We have diamonds in any sizes that are perfect, in white or blue-white color. Perfect in proportion and brilliancy, perfectly flawless—perfect in every way.

We will sell diamonds subject to exchange at full value for a larger stone at any time—six months or six years. We open accounts with responsible parties.

PROPERTY OWNERS ON TRAIL OF CITY HALL

Offer Coalinga Trustees Bonus to Get Building Located.

COALINGA, Sept. 10.—The live property owners in the vicinity of Sixth and E streets have been quietly working for the past few days, and have now offered the city trustees a bonus of $1,000 if they will purchase the lots upon which the Reliance Supply Company is located, and build the city hall there. Frank Cheney, who has been working upon such a subscription, stated that he has already $700 subscribed, and two of the largest property owners in that neighborhood, who are out of the city, yet to be heard from.

The Reliance lots are owned by Charles Sandeson, who offered them to the city for $6500, and the bonus from the property owners will bring the cost to the city down to $5500. As this price is lower, in comparison with suitable location, than any others offered, it is probable that the offer of those located in that neighborhood will be accepted. However, nothing has been given out as yet in the matter, and the trustees may have more offers.

J. J. Long returned yesterday from Fresno, where he had been in consultation with the district attorney in regard to getting the necessary papers to bring back W. B. Perry, who had been arrested in Oregon on a charge of embezzlement preferred by the Times Publishing Company.

Long had been detailed by Marshal Moffett to bring Perry to Coalinga, but upon investigation by the district attorney it was found that as the alleged shortages were not more than fifty dollars in any one specific instance, a felony charge could not be maintained, and therefore no extradition papers could be secured. It was also found that the minutes of the company's books did not specify what salary Perry was to get for acting as manager of the concern, and it would be a hard thing to get a conviction from this fact, althought it was understood among the directors that he was to receive $200 per month for his services.

Mrs. Dr. R. C. Shaw has returned from an extended visit with relatives in Sierra Madre.

Chester Enos left yesterday morning for Madera to spend a week visiting friends.

Carl Eastman returned this morning from Emory, Utah, where he journeyed in the interest of the Coalinga-Utah Exploration Company.

William Zinkand of the California Compounding Company, is attending to business of the company at the general office in San Jose. He is expected to return the first of the week.

Miss Clara Mason, sister of Mrs. F. J. McCollum, left this morning to visit Iowa friends residing in Los Angeles. She will return in about six weeks.

Mrs. Jarmalowsky, wife of the proprietor of the Star Shoe Store, returned last evening from Long Beach, where she has been summering. Sam has tendered his resignation as a member of the "Married Bachelors' Club."

H. Bauman, father of S. Bauman, proprietor of the Liberty Theater, arrived today from San Francisco, bringing with him plans for remodeling the theater. He will remain here and assist his son in conducting the business of the theater.

H. M. Storey of San Francisco, E. M. Gillespie and J. F. Guffy of Pittsburg, Kan, and Robert Pitcairn of Pasadena, are guests at the Pleasent Valley hotel, arriving yesterday afternoon by auto from Bakersfield, and taking in the oil fields between that city and Coalinga. The party is looking over the Coalinga field today.

REEDLEY IS DIVIDED ON ELECTION FOR FIRE PROTECTION

Claimed System Proposed Will Reduce Insurance Rates.

REEDLEY, Sept. 10.—Interest over the election in regard to the proposed fire district Monday is at white heat, as some of the most prominent business men and also residents living beyond the point where the water protection will reach are opposed to the proposition. The business men who are opposed state that it will retard the possibility of incorporation at least another ten years and that if Reedley had decided to incorporate at the recent election its citizens could enjoy not only perfect fire protection but also many other advantages of an incorporated town. However, they concede that better fire protection is needed.

A plat has been drawn by G. H. Blowers, owner of the Reedley water works, showing that when the proposed water mains are laid at least 250 acres and perhaps 275 acres of the proposed fire district will have water protection in case of fire, in addition to the protection of the chemical engine. It the election is carried in favor or the fire district four more hydrants will be attached to the 6-inch water main which will be installed down G street (Main street) to the Grand hotel. This will give water protection to all property within 1000 feet of any hydrant, including the Reedley laundry the First Methodist Episcopal church the First Baptist church, the United Brethren church, etc. On Tenth street east and west from Main street, hydrants will be attached to the water main which was installed last winter. The hydrants will be installed at each alley as far west as the county road and as far east as the alley back of the United Brethren church. In the alley which runs back of Mario Deneen's home a 4-inch water main was put in last winter and hydrants will be attached, giving water protection to all property within 1000 feet in all directions. This alley extends from Tenth to Eleventh street, a distance of one block. Protection will be given as far as Frane's new residence, the Eymann homes and other homes within 1000 feet of the water main. The grammar school building will also be within the radius of water protection, though the high school building will be beyond.

G. H. Blowers states that he may install 4-inch water mains from Guild hall down the alley between Tenth and Twelfth streets so that the greater part of Chinatown will have better protection.

If the election is carried Mr. Blowers says that he will put in new pumps in order to comply with the requirements of the fire insurance underwriters. The requirements are that a stream of water from a 6-inch main and passing 100 feet through a 3-inch hose and out a three-fourths or 1-inch nozzle have a pressure of eighty pounds to the square inch. Such a hose with eighty pounds pressure will throw 24,000 gallons of water each hour a distance of at least 100 feet, more or less, according to the angle of the nozzle.

When these requirements are satisfied the fire insurance underwriters assure the Reedley people that a reduction of 10 cents on each $100, or a 20 per cent reduction of the present insurance rate of 45 cents per $100 on resident property, will be made. The insurance rate on business buildings will also be decreased 10 cents per hundred.

The election will be close, as the town is divided on the issue, but it is believed that those in favor of the proposed fire district will win and that within three months Reedley will have as good protection against fire as any of the small towns in the valley.

The pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church reports that the work of the conference year is closing well. At the service last Sunday morning quite a large class of probationers was received into full membership, and at the morning service next Sunday a goodly number more will come in.

The benevolent collections will all be full this year, it is expected, and all departments of the church work has been carefully looked after. A petition commending the work of the Rev. Mr. Hocker and requesting his return for the third year is now being circulated and will be sent to Bishop E. H. Hughes, who will preside at the coming annual conference at Fresno, beginning September 27th.

ICING CARS ALONG THOUSAND FOOT PLATFORM AT HUGE CALWA PLANT

Scene at Valley Ice Company, loading cars with ice from 1,000 feet platform.

The icing station at Calwa of the Valley Ice Company, is now in its first season, and in some ways is unique. One of the most striking features of its equipment is the long loading platform shown in the cut. This loading platform is 1000 feet long, and the equipment is such that two complete trains can be iced at the same time.

The ice plant lies between spur tracks of both the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Company. The new yards of the Santa Fe will be close to the plant, while technically the Southern Pacific yards include that point in their length of some four or five miles.

Spur tracks, one from the Santa Fe and one from the Southern Pacific, extend on either side of the loading platform. Day and night make no difference to the loading gangs, and the icing of strings of cars under the glare of the arc lights in the comparative darkness of the surrounding country make a sight of the activity at night a striking one.

The ice blocks shoot out of trap doors in the storage rooms to a long inclined causeway that leads to the platform, which is on a level with the roofs of the refrigerator cars on the spur tracks. The big ice blocks are dragged up the causeway in the same manner that the boats of the "Chute the Chutes," or the cars of the roller coaster are taken to the top of the incline to start their thrilling rides in the amusement parks. An endless belt with iron projections, catches the block and shovels it up the long plane on to the long path of the platform, some of the cakes to the last car at the further end.

Here was one of the problems. On the usual loading platforms the ice is loaded from only one side, and this condition allows a guard rail to be placed on the opposite side for the guidance of the block. At Calwa, however, the ice is loaded from each side and this method could not be followed.

The simple expedient of providing a little narrow guage steel track solved the problem. The low steel rails commence at the bottom of the incline where gooden guards guide the ice block on its trip to the top of the platform. By the time the block reaches the platform the heat of the friction has worn grooves in the ice and it continues on its way riding on the rails.

Gang planks are laid from the loading platform to the ice bunkers of the refrigerator cars. The loading gangs deflect the blocks as they arrive, one at a time, at the gang planks. Heavy iron prongs are used to chop up the ice in the bunkers and allow it to settle in the boxes. It takes only two or three minutes to load each car with ice.

GROWERS OF CLOVIS FORM RAISIN POOL

Growers about Clovis have formed a raisin pool which is said to embrace something like 600 tons. This pool has been held for 3¾ cents, this price being asked at the time of the more active buying of some days ago, and no reduction being announced. This is the first instance which has been mentioned on Raisin Row this year of anything like concerted effort on the part of a number of growers. Reports on the attitude of buyers in the Clovis section yesterday indicated no change in the situation.

BAKERSFIELD IS LOGICAL CENTER OF OIL INDUSTRY IN CALIFORNIA

Companies in Coalinga Field Are Not Affected by Recent Cut to Thirty Cents Made by Standard and Associated Oil Companies.

(BY GUY H. SALISBURY.)

Coalinga, September 10, 1910

The meeting at Bakersfield resulted in the forming of the "California Oil Men's Association," a body of men, who represent the oil men who has honestly and faithfully sought to develop the oil territory, under the rulings of the land department, and mining usages, long held good by our Supreme Court, but recently attacked by the ruling of the land department. The logical center of the oil business of California is at Bakersfield, or Fresno. The organization at Los Angeles seems to be dominated by men who are largely interested in patented lands, whose interests do not run as closely with the oil men who compose the Bakersfield organization. One matter that appeared just under the surface of the business, at Bakersfield, was a desire to more equally divide the oil business with San Francisco. The men of San Francisco, who have now large interests in the San Joaquin valley oil fields, have taken a keen interest in the "California Oil Men's Association," which may result in a better understanding with San Francisco in the way of trade.

The Coalinga field is widening every few months, the formation has a steady dip to the east by south, as demonstrated by the new wells coming in, which has determined a much greater field. The Kern River field is a long way from being worked out, and the west side of Kern county is developing into a greater field than the old Kern River field. All this designates Bakersfield, the logical center of the oil development. The Coast fields come in for third or fourth place.

The two organizations will work for one common purpose, along lines best suited to each organization, that of trying to get a favorable hearing before the Department of the Interior, and failing in this to appeal to the President, then to Congress for laws that will protect the oil men in the development work already done, and a future law that shall determine the status of the oil lands, legal or in fee.

The price named last month by the Associated and the Standard, 30 cents per barrel at the well, was not for this field evidently, as no company or producer here is delivering oil under this bid. Practically all of the companies in this field are members of the Agency, except the twelve railroad leases, the property of the Standard, the property of the Associated, and six other companies. This price was made then for a purpose, as there is no oil to be had here, and that purpose will be shown a little later, as data is gathered. The Coalinga Peerless is delivering an old contract to the Associated at 18 cents; the Sauer Dough on an old contract is delivering at 22½ cents; the Wabash has an old contract on which it is delivering 8000 barrels per month at 19 cents, the balance of its production is sold at the market price; the Commercial Petroleum has an old contract on which it is delivering its oil at 40 cents; the Carbon is delivering one-half of its production to the Associated, under an old contract, at 40 cents, the other half to the Standard at 40 cents, or a little less, the Stockholders (Geo. D. Roberts) has on old contract with the Associated at 40 cents. The other field companies are with the Agency.

The Creme Petroleum Company, section 30-20-15, carried the hole in well No. 1, 2000 feet with a Parker rotary in forty days. At this point the 10-inch casing was set in. The hole was found in perfect condition and pipe going in free. The well is now 2230 feet feet deep, drilling with standard tools; the water will be shut off at about 2400 feet. The oil sand is about 2600 feet deep at this point, as estimated by the sands in the American Petroleum wells adjoining this property. The formation has been blue shale with occasional hard shells and flinty oyster shells. The rotary is now on well No. 2, 1330 feet deep with 6-inch drilling pipe, making a 14½-inch hole for the 10-inch casing; the hole will be carried 200 feet deep with the rotary and finished with standard tools. The plant is well equipped with steam power. Material has been ordered for a combination rotary-standard rig for well No. 3.

The Blair Oil Company, section 14-21-15, is drilling well No. 2 under contract, and is 560 feet deep with 12½-inch casing. The surface soil and sands were cased off with the 270 feet of stove pipe casing, landed on a bed of pipe clay. The present formation is yellow clay with occasional stringers of sand and creek gravel. The rig is up to date, a large belt house, an 84-foot derrick, triple bull legs and wide heavy foundations for the legs. Well No. 1 has been converted into a water well, furnishing an ample supply of water. The management has exemplified its faith in the territory by undertaking the second well, which will add to the development of the south field. The property is located so that the oil will gravitate to the tanks at Coalinga Station No. 1 of the Producers Transportation Company.

The Southern Pacific Company has so far adopted a policy towards their leases in this field that has stimulated production and a much better feeling towards the company. We have not heard of a case where any advantage has been taken by the railroad company under their lease, wherein the company operating a lease is obligated to accept the market price for oil. The price was fixed at 50 cents by the purchasing department at the break in price last spring, and as far as we have been able to learn the price has been steady and the demand has been for all the oil produced. This has done much towards a better understanding between the lessee and the lesser and a further development of the leases. The price of 50 cents makes a cheap fuel for the railroad, and at present market a better price for the lessee.

The Coalinga Security Oil Company, section 8-20-15, completed the drilling of well No. 1 last week at 2841 feet with the rotary, having 135 feet of oil sand, the last 25 feet showing considerable oil that came up with the water. The water will be bailed off as soon as the string of 4½-inch casing is connected up and the surface arrangements perfected to care for the production. The showing of the well indicates a big producer. This is the first well on the west side to be drilled into the oil sand and completed with a rotary. The strike is further testimony that the oil sands extend east by south under the floor of the valley to the syncline.

The Western Pipe and Steel Company of Los Angeles, which has the contract to construct the two 55,000 barrel steel tanks at Coalinga Station No. 1, about one mile south of town, is working one full crew of twenty men on one of the tanks. The foreman stated that by the end of the week he expected a full force of men on the job. As far as is known no "picket" is patroling the job as reported by the strike committee. Everything appears orderly about the station.

The Baird Oil Company, section 24-22-15, cut off 200 feet of the 6 5-8 inch casing, above the shoe; an effort will be made to drill by this pipe; the water will be shut off at a point below where it was cemented before. The well is reported to be 2680 feet deep with 4½-inch casing. At about 2560 feet the bit entered a hard oil sand, eight feet of which was very hard, 10 feet of this sand compares well with the sand of the east side; showing considerable gas. From this formation the tools went into blue shale.

The crew of men working on the El Cerrito well, section 14, 23-17, are shipping the stuff, material and casing here from Mariposa for Captain Barneston's interests. The 6 1-4-inch was loose, so all of that was got out. 4105 feet of 8 1-4, 2972 feet in the well, 2,870 feet was pulled; there were 2520 feet of 10-inch in the well, and this was shot off about 1000 feet from the bottom. The balance was pulled out and will be shipped to the Sunset district, where it is hoped it will do service in an oil well.

The Southfields Oil company, section 33, 22-16, is 2170 feet deep with well No. 2. The bit went into the oil sand about 65 feet. The manager then determined it was time to shut off water, as he has passed the last water sand. The crew is now rimming the hole down to a big shell, above the oil sand, a bridge will be put in and the water will be shut off on the big shell. This done, the tools will be drilled through the oil sand. The indications are good for a well of light oil, about 33 degrees B, or better.

The Producers' Transportation company has a 35 horse-power auto truck hauling material and supplies to the stations south of town, the terminal being 51 miles from town. During the early summer, before the roads were so badly cut up, the trip was made in nine hours with a three ton load, while with animals it would require three days.

The Boychester Oil Company, section 18, 21-15, bailed off the water last Monday. The hole stood dry for twelve hours, when the water came in and it was found that the cement had not set on the outside of the pipe. A considerable amount of mud was in the bottom of the hole. The pipe has been loosened and will be carried deeper to get away from the present conditions, and re-cemented.

The Pantheon Oil company, section 32, 19-15, is 2320 feet deep with 8 1-4-inch casing; the water was shut off at about 2550 feet. The rotary rig on well No. 2 is making good progress and is now 1350 feet deep. The formation follows that of the Empire well in the same section.

The Dominion Oil company, section 7, 22-17, is 1850 feet deep with 10-inch casing. The formation is changing from brown shale, with oyster shells mixed through it, to oil sand and shale. The water will be shut off at about 1600 feet.

The M. M. & T. Oil company, section 4, 20-15, cemented off the water in well No. 2 last week at 2765 feet with extra heavy 7 5-8-inch casing. This was the last job of cementing that Expert Tom Hayes did before leaving for Egypt.

The Coalinga Metropolis Oil company, section 26, 19-15, well No. 1 is on the beam, working the water out of the formation. The sand has not started yet. The production is 1.9 barrels or better, 21.8 degrees B.

The British California Oil company, Limited, on section 16, 20-15, has commenced building a combination-rotary standard rig for well No. 2 on the east half of the southwest quarter of the section.

The Berkeley-Coalinga Oil company, section 2, 21-14, completed the water well and now has a supply for boiler and drilling purposes. Well No. 1 was spudded in last week.

The South Pole Oil company, section, 18, 21-16, has levied a 3-cent assessment to raise funds to enable the company to resume operations.

The Queen Oil company, section 14, 20-14, finished up well No. 5 last week and the well is now on the beam making 75 barrels per day, 14 gravity oil.

The Coalinga Hub Oil company, section 22, 21-15, is 3410 feet deep with 4 1-2-inch casing, loose in the hole.

NO TONGUE CAN TELL HOW I SUFFERED WITH ECZEMA

Until I was Cured by Cuticura Remedies. Body and Face were Covered. Terrible Pain and Itching. Made Up Mind Death was Near and Longed to be at Rest. Began to Feel Better After First Bath with Cuticura Soap and Application of Cuticura Ointment.

No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with itching and bleeding eczema, until I was cured by the Cuticura Remedies, and I am so grateful I want the world to know, for what helped me will help others. My body and face were covered with sores. One day it would seem to be better, and then break out again with the most terrible pain and itching. I have been sick several times, but never in my life did I experience such awful suffering as with this eczema. I had made up my mind that death was near at hand, and I longed for that time when I would be at rest. I had tried many different doctors and medicines without success, and my mother brought me the Cuticura Remedies, insisting that I try them. I began to feel better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap, and one application of Cuticura Ointment.

I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and have taken four bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and consider myself well. This was nine years ago and I have had no return of the trouble since. Any person having any doubt about this wonderful cure by the Cuticura Remedies can write to my address.

BIGGER SALES POINT TO ENSUING RUSH SEASON IN REAL ESTATE HERE

Tract Near Madera for Colonization Sells for $65,000; Building More Active; Will Remodel Bank Here; Values on the Increase.

The ensuing fortnight is expected to see under way one of the greatest real estate and building seasons ever experienced in the history of Fresno, with interest in both country and city property very strong and with every indication for continued advances in prices for all sorts of lands.

The opening sales of this season show, it is believed, that the invasion of capital from Los Angeles and San Francisco will continue. A big tourist season is now in progress, with promise, it is thought, of much new money coming in from the East. Better prices for fruits are expected to bring about more buying of lands by local people. General business conditions the country over are declared to be better, just as they have been getting better locally.

The amount of building in sight, to keep pace with the real estate prospects, is large. In fact, building has continued through the summer in considerable volume. Several big projects will be under way by the fall holidays, and some others are in the air which may materialize, it is thought before next fall. Most of these are expected to exert a decided influence upward on prices of property in this city.

One of the largest deals reported in weeks was closed a few days ago by Kittrell & Ness of this city. They sold 1,440 acres of raw land north of Madera to Los Angeles parties for the sum of $65,000. The property will be put on the market shortly for colonization purposes. This is one of the first buys made here, worth big money, by Los Angeles people since the period of last spring when so much of this sort of thing was going on.

It is one of several colonizing propositions said to be pending, any of which may materialize soon.

But in the absence of any other deal during the week to eclipse this sale, others of the dealers are knocking out propositions which in the aggregate show that much money is now going into lands.

$40,000 IN LANDS.

Haber Bros. report that they have made sales in the last three weeks amounting to $40,000. In the last few days they have sold a forty-acre tract in Fancher Creek colony to C. L. Gates, and a piece of eighteen acres in the same colony to S. A. Watson for $1,500. This firm reports that indications are excellent for a very large volume of business during the ensuing fall months.

There is said to be a growing demand now for dairy property, as well as for city lots. The putting through of the new railroad proposition there has made lands in the Laguna country move into the spotlight to some extent. The prosperity of farmers this season is already beginning to reflect itself, also, in local lands.

Within the city, several localities on the outskirts of the present business district are showing an increased interest for buyers, and it is expected that this will be intensified as the season advances and various building projects go through. The neighborhood of the hotel which is to be built on I and Merced streets, which is just a block from the site of the new garage of the White automobile people and the new undertaking parlors of Stephens & Bean, I and Tuolumne streets, is one of those where attention is now centering. The region just outside of J and Kern is coming in for attention, and values there have been advanced as a result of several recent sales of size there.

AMONG THE BUILDERS.

Among the builders, interest is being shown in the announcement that a prominent clubman here is soon to build near this city, on a fine suburban property, a house to cost about $3,000. This will be of stone to the second floor, and shingled above that. It will have ten rooms, and will be exceptionally well appointed.

A. H. Owen is soon to build a bungalow on Van Ness avenue, one and a half stories in height, the plans for which are now being gotten out by E. Mathewson, the architect.

A $1,600 bungalow is soon to be built on R street, near Tulare, for Mrs. Ryland. James & Cannon are the contractors. The same contractors are also to build a bungalow at a cost of $2,200 for W. Lloyd on the Elmhurst tract.

TO REMODEL BANK.

Work will be started some time this week on the remodeling of the People's Savings Bank of this city. The work will be done by A. J. Allen. The same contractor is just finishing with the enlargement of the Radin & Kamp building, the inside work now being in the last stages. Allen has just completed a two-story house at the Caiwa winery for the use of the superintendent there. He is also just finishing up on I street, between Kern and Inyo, a veterinary hospital and horseshoeing shop for H. E. McKay. An addition is also soon to be put to the Valley Foundry by this contractor.

The new Republican building will be ready for occupancy early next month. A large force of carpenters will be started in on the finishing work early this week.

Brick work is now in progress on E. A. Mitchell's building on Tulare street, near M.

DEMAND FOR HOUSES.

Incidentally there promises to be a greater demand for houses here this fall than in some time past. There is now a very large call for all desirable or semi-desirable properties to rent, and it is predicted that this is to bring out a crop of apartment houses and flats during the winter.

Plans for an apartment house which may be erected by Dr. D. H. Trowbridge and Dr. J. L. Maupin on Tulare street near N are now in the hands of contractors, but it has not yet been definitely determined if the building will be erected as now planned.

ROOSEVELT TO TOUR TEXAS.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 10.—Colonel Cecile Lyon, chairman of the Republican state executive committee, who is here conferring with the local Republican leaders, announced that ex-President Roosevelt would tour Texas next March.

Colonel Lyon will meet Colonel Roosevelt in New York next January and the itinerary of the latter will then be arranged.

ABOLISH PUBLIC TOWELS OF CITY SCHOOLS AS GERM BREEDERS

American School Children to Be Told of Mexican Independence Friday.

Three matters came up for special consideration at the meeting of the principals of the city schools yesterday morning in the office of City School Superintendent C. L. McLane. Special sanitary measures will be inaugurated in the schools this year, there will be provision made for backward pupils, and finally, there will be recognition of the Mexican Independence Day next Friday, as the results of yesterday's meeting.

NO MORE SCHOOL TOWELS.

Hereafter all pupils will be expected to carry their own towels to the schools, as the "school towels" have been banished, together with the drinking cups formerly found for the use of all pupils indiscriminately. This measure, together, with the installation of the sanitary drinking fountains, where the pupils drink naturally from a jet of water, was taken at the suggestion of the State Board of Health. The common towel is regarded not only as a culture bed for germs, but as a vicious agency for the dissemination of disease, particularly when taken for face use, even when changed often. The slight inconvenience caused pupils is believed to be entirely overshadowed by the elimination of dangers incident to the use of the roller towel.

The feather duster also has been abolished, and instead dusters of cheesecloth dipped either in water or some antiseptic fluid will be used. These wrung out will pick up the dust and germs and not scatter them about as the feather dusters do. The department will start the term with a hundred yards of cheesecloth, and there will be quiet experimentation as to the best means for treating the dust clothes. Other sanitary measures used in the past will be continued. Among them is a form of dustless floor brush which carries a small reservoir of kerosene. The oil, which is both a disinfectant and a dust-layer, flows down the bristles to the floor. Where brooms are used experimenting is going on with various dust-laying compounds. These various sanitary measures, of proved excellence in other fields, will bring the local department, it is believed, up with the most advanced ideas evolved for the protection of the health of the public school pupils.

FOR BACKWARD PUPILS.

Several experiments in methods of handling backward pupils will be made this year to discover the best way of educating those scholars below the normal grade of efficiency. One will be the cutting up of some of the classes into major and minor divisions, the former for the pupils of average ability, the latter for those who have difficulty in carrying the amount of work prescribed in the course of study. The experiment will be along lines suggested by Superintendent McLane in a report to the school board last July. In regard to this problem, the report reads as follows:

"The subject of repeaters or laggards in our public schools has received much attention by the press and in educational gatherings the past year. Early in the term just closed, this matter was taken up in our teachers' meetings, and several plans were suggested to meet the problem. Among these were: A more flexible system of marking; major and minor sections of each class with the same lessons assigned to both, carefully graded where possible, and a different basis for marking the two sections; arranging easy stages between sections where there are several classes of the same grade in a building; an ungraded class to give the advantages of individual instruction where pupils may be behind in one or more subjects; passing a class, or a section of a class along to the next grade at any time when it is qualified to take up the advanced work.

"Our schools have become so mechanical and our teachers such slaves to system that far too much time and energy is wasted in trying to maintain the system. We sometimes hear the expression, 'You cannot see the town for the houses.' I hope the time will soon come when we cannot see the schools for the pupils."

MEXICAN INDEPENDENCE.

In accordance with the desire of the Mexican committee in charge of the Mexican Centennial celebration on September 16th, there will be some observance of the day in the Fresno schools. The committee has requested the observance of the day throughout the schools of the United States. Owing to the shortness of the time for preparation, and to the fact that next week the school authorities will be busy with the registration of pupils and with other matters incident to the opening of the schools, Mr. McLane remarked that it would be impracticable to arrange a program. The teachers of the various schools, however, will tell their pupils of the day, and its significance as the centennial anniversary of the unification of the petty states of Mexico into a single republic.

PUPILS REGISTER.

Principal Liddicks of the high school, and the principals of the various grammar and elementary schools were at their offices yesterday afternoon to handle the first rush of registration. While there was considerable activity, no significant figures will be obtainable until after the regular registration Monday.

As far as possible all of the preliminary work for the schools has been done. Meetings of the teachers of the various schools were held yesterday afternoon at which they were assigned to their various rooms, and matters of the schools discussed.

HAWSON WILL NOT BE WITH CHURCH

Henry Hawson denied emphatically yesterday that he would again assume the role of deputy district attorney in the office of Denver Church on the 15th of September, as reported. Frank A. Curtain, who was appointed by Church, will fill the vacancy caused by Hawson's resignation, immediately upon his return from his vacation. Hawson was busily engaged yesterday in moving his effects from his former office in the court house to his home, where he will establish temporary headquarters, until he reaches a decision as to his future actions.

BUSINESS MEN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL MOVEMENT REACHES COAST

Eastern Workers Will Come to Great Rally Here November 12th.

Rev. C. L. Beal Is Elected President of County S. Association.

Plans for a business men's rally to boost the Sunday schools of the county were discussed at a meeting of the Fresno County Sunday school association at the Fresno Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon. The rally, which will be held on Saturday, November 12th will be attended by a trio of prominent Eastern business men who have been instrumental in the business men's movement, a campaign that has swept the Eastern states and is now about to come to the Pacific Coast. These Eastern workers are Marion Lawrence of Chicago, international secretary; W. N. Hartshorn, millionaire publisher, chairman of the international Sunday School association, of Boston, and E. K. Warren of Fair Oaks, Michigan. Yesterday's meeting was attended by C. R. Fisher of San Francisco, secretary of the state Sunday school organization. It is hoped to hold a great revival in the interests of the Sunday schools on the advent of the Eastern men.

Officers for the county association also were elected yesterday for the coming year. The new board consists of Rev. Charles L. Beal, pastor of the Northside Christian church, president; R. A. Powell, re-elected secretary; Mrs. H. F. Wakefield, superintendent of the teachers' training class; Mrs. Deyo, superintendent of the temperance work, and Mrs. George W. Dowds, superintendent of the primary work.

The rally on November 12th will be the first in a series of meetings in the interest of the Sunday schools. It will be followed by a rally of the Sunday school members on the following day. On Monday, November 14th, there will be a meeting of the pastors of the various churches to discuss methods for keeping up the interests in the Sunday schools. At yesterday's meeting, which was attended by the pastors and Sunday school superintendents of the city generally, a committee was appointed to have charge of the rally. It consists of Rev. W. B. Gillespie, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, R. A. Powell and Mrs. H. F. Wakefield.

ETAPLES, QUAINT LITTLE FRENCH VILLAGE, BECOMES ART CONSCIOUS AND ARTIFICIAL

Was Dirty, Unkempt and Picturesque; Artists Flocked in and Town Primed Up, Spoiling That Dear Atmosphere; Everybody a Poser.

(BY MARGUERITE THOMPSON.)

Several years ago there was a quaint little town on the French coast of the English channel, one of a thousand other little towns that lived and prospered unnoticed and unknown. But in this particular village the national customs and dress were unusually attractive and pure, the [illegible] crooked streets so quaint, the little homes most picturesque and the fisher girls unusually pretty. Moreover there was a harbor filled with brown sailed boats and beautiful stretches of sand dunes running up into black forests of stumpy, twisted dwarf pines. Around the town were long stretches of rolling country, green and yellow with crops or red with poppies, rising into hills set with abandoned wind mill towers, their huge wings broken and motionless; then suddenly dropping into quiet valleys where a cluster of red roofs among the dark trees told of a picturesque nucleus of a village, thrifty, peaceful farms within five minutes of the desolation and wild beauty of the dunes.

Such was Etaples when the first artist happened upon it. He was more than delighted with his "find" and when he discovered a large empty loft which, with the addition of a skylight, would make an excellent studio this and his room below for only ten francs a month and all the pretty fisher girls anxious to pose for a few sous a day — he could hardly wait to send to Paris for supplies. It was an artist's paradise and of course he could not keep it all to himself, so he whispered his luck to a few special friends. Etaples was doomed. In a few years there was an artist colony there and popular teachers brought classes down for summer sketching. Some even bought homes in the vicinity. The matelots rose to the occasion. They put a few panes of glass in the roof of every attic and called it a studio—but the price was not the same. Every house was renovated and a sign hung out, "Rooms for rent." Thoughts of electricity and gas began to disturb their minds for the first time, for did not the "strangers" demand such luxuries?

It was not so very many years ago that Etaples was "discovered" but the transformation has been rapid and complete. The old charm has gone from the streets, from the homes and from the people. The houses are all being renovated, the streets cleaned as often as thrice a week; an excellent thing for the people, but with these signs of progress too often vanishes the picturesqueness. And the simple old fisherfolk are become a tribe of beggars and models. You cannot step outside your door or walk down the street but that you are accompanied by a host of ragged children [illegible] ing, "[illegible] petit [illegible]" Every child [illegible], even those of retired and well-to-do families, asks for a sou for himself, for his little brother or for mother. As you approach tears roll from his eyes and trickle through his [illegible] and [illegible] accents [illegible] strong as you pass until when you have left him behind the voice follows you in loud and angry command, "Un petit sou!" Yet he would be the most [illegible] boy in Etaples if you were to give him anything. The babies are taught to hold out their tiny hands and lisp "p'tit sou" before they can say "mama!"

There is still one variation of this cry, that is, "Posez, madame!" Every man, woman and child in the village looks upon posing as the shortest road to wealth and is not only willing to pose but insists upon posing and will not take "no" for an answer. You stop in at the grocery store and the woman, instead of waiting upon you, snatches up a grimy, grinning baby, strikes a picturesque attitude of her mind at least "Posez madame? [illegible] It was charming! Oh I have posed for many artists, they all like me, I pose so well!" I have come out of the house sometimes and been greeted by a familiar shout from far out on the water, "Posez, madame?" and have discovered that it came from some small boys playing in a boat too far out for me to distinguish them even!

The fisher girls are many of them exceedingly pretty and all very anxious to pose, but they are well versed in all this? very pretty! Mon. P.— painted the tricks of the trade, such as waiting until you get well along with a picture and then refusing to come again unless you pay five times as much. They coax to be paid in advance, and if the artist is so foolish of course that is the last he sees of his model. They will never under any circumstance pose for the figure, in fact it requires much persuasion to get them to change their black dresses for more paintable colors and to loosen their hair which they wear skinned back into tight Psyche knots. One artist found himself quite boycotted because he tried to have one of the girls pose in a dress with low neck and short sleeves, something they will not even do for a woman. Yet they think nothing of running out in the street with little more than a chemise and short red petticoat or of going shrimping in a single garment filled with holes that discloses much more than it conceals.

The girls take the money which they earn by posing and furnish their future homes with it; that is one reason they are all so anxious to pose, for while they only get a franc and a half or two a day that is more than they can earn in any other way. When an Etaple couple get married the man supplies the house and the girl, the furniture. Anne had a pretty little model, Yvonne. She was only 14 and had just acquired a beau. Hitherto she [illegible] rather indifferent about posing, but suddenly she became very enthusiastic, especially when it was pay day. We used to wonder at the change until one day she came running in, her eyes shining. She had begun to collect furniture for her house, she told us. She had bought a clock, a [illegible] little gilded clock under a glass [illegible] such as stands on the mantle of every Etaples home. All the young men have to serve two years in the army when they reach the age of 21 and it is against the law for them to marry until after they have served their time, a law which they are very bitter against. However they get around the law by being fiance and considering that the same as a marriage. Of course the girl still lives at home collecting furniture and taking care of the children until her fiance is out of the army and they can be legally married. An Etaples girl never has but one beau nor the boy but one girl whom in the ordinary course of events he marries. They are very particular. If Victor thinks that Jacques has danced once too often with his girl there is a great commotion! There was one girl in the village who broke all the rules. She smiled on all the boys while the village looked on with scandalized eyes. Finally she became engaged to one of them but even an engagement was not binding to Marcelle and when her fiance returned from service, he found her married to another man. However I think this is almost the only case of the kind in the annals of Etaples. There have been many amusing little romances and tragedies as well in this quiet fisher village and of course all are public property and the models regale you with them during rests and during the pose if you will allow it; stories of a great English painter who insisted upon marrying an ignorant little fisher girl who could not read or write and who wouldn't learn—"and she wasn't even pretty, mad'moiselle, nor did she want to marry him, but her mother made her!" And then there was Marie-Eugenie, who was indiscreet enough to wish to marry a peasant instead of the fisherman her mother selected and was consequently turned out of her home. An American girl took her in and Marie lives with her in the position of maid and model, but she could never marry her peasant because a French girl or man cannot marry without his parents' consent. Of course no Etaples girl could openly talk to a young man on the street or go walking with him, although in the evenings you see the girls wander off on the walk by the sand dunes two and two, pretending to be quite unaware that on the other side of the road are two young fellows. The exception is the Sunday night dance. The girls go to the hall together and the boys together, but while the whole town is gathered in the street outside to look in at the windows, inside the hall there are no chaperones. The boys sit in the windows, their arms about the girls' waists and give a squeeze and a kiss now and then. In a window where I was watching were three girls and a boy. When some one came and carried off one girl to the dance, the boy merely transferred his arm—and his affections—to the next girl until all were gone, then since life held nothing more for him in that window, he, too, moved on. These weekly dances are lively affairs. The pieces all sound very similar with a quick, jerky rhythm that seems only suitable for a jig. The dancers usually spin round and round like tops until you get so dizzy watching them that you have to hold onto the building for support. They sometimes vary this by hopping up and down for a few measures and sending their partners spinning like balls from one end of the room to the other. They keep this up all night long, singing and shrieking and stamping so loud that you can hear them for blocks.

The day after we arrived in Etaples it began to rain and continued daily for more than six weeks. Anne worked in her studio on a large decoration she was painting and I had models and painted in my own studio. Sometimes I made sketches in the peasant cottages. One time Madame Debray, who kept the Cafe de la Marine down on the quai, took me over to a little cottage where lived the oldest couple in Etaples. It was one of the rare old homes with the red oak [illegible] and the great fireplace [illegible] with brass and copper [illegible]. "Look," cried Madame, pointing to the couple before the fire, "see how old they are! Did you ever see any one so old and [illegible]?" The old man [illegible] nodded up with pleasure. "Very old," he murmured, "soon we die. My woman is not well, I think that she dies first!" "Yes," answered Madame, "they will both die soon! See how wrinkled they are and toothless. The old lady is almost blind!" "And it is hard for me to walk now. I am very old," mumbled the little dried up figure by the stove. It was positively grewsome! That was one interior I did not paint.

Group of Fishing Folk of Etaples.

Finally we decided to brave the elements and paint outside, rain or shine, to sketch the children wading in the water and playing in the sand. It was a heroic resolution, not because of the rain, but on account of the hordes of young savages that swooped down upon us chanting the "Mardi gras" war song. They did everything their ingenious little brains could devise to make our life miserable. They would rush up, scoop off a finger full of paint and dab up the faces of the meek and inoffensive who resented being painted thus and always set up a great howl. They would push our poor models into the water and crowd so close we could see nothing, all the time keeping up a demand for "a little sou," "posez," and "a little bit of paint." Often we were forced to drop paints, palettes and canvas and chase after the little demons until we could give one a smart whack with a camp stool. Upon this the army would take refuge behind old boats and rocks, from the shelter of which they would throw stones and dirt for a while before they sought some other amusement.

An artist's life in Etaples is a strenuous one. Most of the little girls were very good and quiet, but there were two, Eugenie and Marie-Louise, who were, if it is possible, worse than the boys. We could not think what to do with them and finally had them pose as the only way to get rid of them. Eugenie was a pretty child of 11 and always wore a white blouse with a long black corset over it, a red skirt and a white apron. She was very picturesque, but pose she could not! She was never still an instant. It was a great honor to be selected to pose and for three days Eugenie was the proudest and most miserable child in Etaples, for even though she could not keep the pose, she would not give up. It was a very subdued Eugenie after that, she had acquired a new respect, almost an awe, for us. Marie-Louise was the last child you would ever think of painting and it was only because we were quite desperate and could not stand her around another minute that we took her for a model. To our surprise we found her the most attractive, the most interested and willing model of all the children and better still from that time forth Marie-Louise was our devoted follower. All the energy that had hitherto been devoted to annoying us was now used in our behalf. She kept the babies out of the paint, fought off the small boys and even went so far as to carry our campstools home for us.

The children that gathered around us every day were an interesting and entertaining lot in spite of their rags and dirt and ability to annoy. Every little girl has a baby brother or sister to care for. She carries the baby about on her back, bending almost double. If there are no girls in the family the little boys have to pack around the younger ones. Of course there is no place better to amuse the babies than the beach and the most amusing thing on the beach is always the artist. Twenty or thirty always lined up around us keeping up a steady flow of conversation at us and scolding the babies. Every little while at irregular intervals the whole crowd would cry out with one accord, "Un petit sous!" or "Posez Madame!" After having performed this duty they returned to their original topic. We were sitting on a rock wondering what to paint one morning when La Petite Carmine appeared. She was a pretty quaint looking tot of 6 with straight straw colored hair that stood out in all directions and a brilliant scarlet dress—a most unusual color in France. She came running down barefooted and barearmed and plashed into the water. We at once captured her. We never knew her name or where she came from; she was a silent little thing, all she ever said was "Oui" and "menteuse" (liar) to the other children when they tried to tease her and called her "cousine." Everybody is related in Etaples, but few know what their exact relationship is and take refuge in the name of cousin. But Carmine refused all offers of relationship. Every day she would come and pose for us, but one day we waited until well into the afternoon and no Carmine. We sent the others to find her, but she had disappeared as suddenly as she had come.

Our stanchest friend and admirer was Marie Antoinette, a little old woman of 12, and no wonder, for she had already brought up three baby brothers and was then occupied with a tiny sister. She would come down every morning, her fingers busy with her knitting, while the baby clung desperately to her neck to keep from sliding off her back. She would sit close beside us and knit all day long, only stopping to haul in the too inquisitive baby. I have never seen Antoinette for a moment without her knitting, even as she walked and ran she kept the needles flying. She was making woolen stockings for the older boys and her father and they must all be finished before school opened because then there were lessons at night and no time for sewing.

FAMILY OF GUSHERS IS MAKING INCREASED SHOWING NOW

Lakeview Now Far From Most Startling Object in Oil Horizon.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—Interesting information regarding the doings of the gusher family of Central California has just come to hand from the scene of operations. During the present week eight new and old gushers were running a merry race for supremacy down in the San Joaquin valley.

Eliminating the latest strike of the American Oilfields, the Lakeview is still making about 15,000 barrels a day, the American Oil Fields well, on 36 31-22, is estimated from 22,000 to 40,000 barrels; same company's new well No. 68 has been yielding 5000 to 6000 barrels; the Santa Fe gusher is doing about the same.

The American Oil Fields has 800,000 barrels in tanks and 500,000 stored in reservoirs and has just ordered eight more 35,000 barrel tanks.

Honolulu well No. 1 has been brought in at 2700 feet, making 500 barrels a day of 18 gravity oil.

The Santa Fe, on section 36-31-21, well No. 1, is flowing between the eleven and nine-inch casings, making about 1000 barrels. They have three pumping wells on this section making from 300 to 500 barrels each, and another just opposite American Oil Fields No. 79 in the sand at 940 feet. The wells run from 916 feet to 1065 for No. 1, the flowing well.

The big 85,000 barrel reservoir, when completed, together with one 55,000 barrel tank, furnish ample storage to handle the product.

Julius Fried, owner of five-eighths of the Lakeview royalty oil, declares that in all probability the oil will go into the agency.

Much interest is being manifested by oil men in the wells that are being drilled in the immediate vicinity of the Lakeview gusher.

Maricopa Thirty-six Oil Company's 1200 feet south of the Lakeview gusher, is making 500 barrels of 20 gravity oil at 1888 feet. It is expected by the management that this yield will be greatly increased as soon as the sand is bailed out.

Well No. 2 is situated 250 feet southwest of the gusher and is down 1360 feet, carrying a 10-inch casing, the 12½-inch casing having been landed at 1125 feet. It is expected that this well will be completed by October 15th. It is the closest well to the Lakeview yet drilled. A large gusher is expected, but the company will be prepared to keep the flow under control.

The M. and T. Company, operating on the east half of the northwest quarter of section 36, and immediately adjoining Maricopa Thirty-six on the east, has just brought in a large flowing well. The sand was reached at 1550 feet, at which point the eighteen feet of very rich oil sand had been penetrated. A big producer is expected.

OLD OIL OPERATOR VISITS THE FIELD

COALINGA, Sept. 10.—John Bruner, one of the old timers of Goldfield, Nev., and an old friend of J. E. McDermott, of the firm of Louis & Co., is in the city. Bruner is a large stockholder in the Goldfield Consolidated and also in the Goldfield Consolidated and also in and has other interests in the Devil's Den country. He left for that oil town today.

PALMER TO ERECT NEW STEEL TANKS

SANTA MARIA, Sept. 10.—Steel tanks of large capacity will be erected for storage purpose by the Palmer Oil Company, in addition to two concrete reservoirs with a capacity of 1,000,000 barrels each. The company plans a total storage of approximately a million and one-half barrels.

PORTER BECOMES S. P. FUEL HEAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—W. S. Porter, general manager of the Associated, has now practically become head of the entire fuel department of the Southern Pacific. He has just returned to San Francisco after some months spent in the East, in consultation over railroad affairs.

EVANS MAY HEAD OIL CLIQUE ON THE COAST

Retired Rear Admiral Surprised at Magnitude of Oil Industry Here.

COALINGA, Cal., Sept. 10.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, retired, and a party of Eastern capitalists who have been visiting the oil fields in Central California, left Coalinga today for San Francisco. It is rumored that Admiral Evans will head a coalition of important oil interests in the San Joaquin valley fields and will make his home in California.

The admiral rode 120 miles in an automobile yesterday, the most strenuous trip he has taken in twelve years, but suffered no ill effects from the journey. After expressing surprise at the magnitude of the oil industry he said that this coast was practically defenseless and that its industries could be destroyed by an invading nation.

NEW OIL ASSOCIATION SPLITS ON POINTS OF ITS POLICY

Operators Differing From Its Organizers Secure Hold on Helm.

New Directors of Western Producers Not for a Leasing System.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—Control of the Western Oil Producers' Association has been secured by operators who are opposed to views on questions of public policy held by the men who promoted the organization recently.

This capture of the association was signalized by the election of a board of directors at a meeting held in the chamber of commerce building, the following being chosen:

W. W. Orcutt, S. A. Guiberson, T. A. O'Donnell, Captain John Barneson, William Matson, M. H. Whittier, Julius Fried, Fred H. Hall, F. N. Seefield, Dr. Norman Bridge and John Baker, Jr.

One hundred and twenty votes were cast, a majority of the ballots having been sent by mail. A meeting of the directors will be held soon and executive officials of the organization chosen.

Following the announcement of the result of the vote for directors, S. C. Graham tendered his resignation as the secretary to remove his name from the list of members. There were protests against Mr. Graham's action, though he consented as a matter of courtesy to continue to act as chairman, and was given a vote of thanks.

MR. GRAHAM'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Graham said:

"Before proceeding with any further business, I wish to make a statement, and I believe, on account of the position I have occupied with the organization, I should be entitled to that privilege. Before doing so, I want to assure you that in what I am about to say I am not actuated by any feeling of hostility or resentment toward anyone personally.

"I have had only one purpose in the work I have done to bring about an organization of oil men, and that purpose was to assist in securing legislation governing the disposition of publicly owned oil lands that would be in the interest of the whole people and secure for them what they are entitled to.

"Most of the men who have tonight been elected directors of this association I regard as my friends. Some of them I have known for a great many years, and one of them I have known ever since he was a boy. I believe these men have and do entertain the same friendly feelings for me that I have for them, and I hope nothing that has happened or will happen will disturb or affect in any way our personal relations. [illegible] attitude with reference to oil legislation differs so widely from my own views that it will be impossible for me to work with them or act with any organization which they dominate or the policy which they control. I have never in my life remained a member of any organization that was working to accomplish something I believed to be wrong.

"As I expect to use whatever influence I possess to bring about a condition directly opposite to that which the newly elected board of directors favor, I believe the straight forward and manly thing for me to do is to withdraw as a member of this organization, and I therefore request the secretary to strike my name from the membership roll."

NOT TRAVELING SAME DIRECTION

Charles F. Fox stated that in his opinion the manly thing for the chairman to do would be to stay with the organization and attempt to influence its action, and that no man could expect to have everybody else agree with him in regard to just how the work should be done. Mr. Graham stated that if the difference in opinion was only in relation to the working out of details, he would feel as Mr. Fox did, but the difference was fundamental in that the directors of the association and himself were striving to arrive at entirely different results.

"If we were traveling in the same direction, though we might differ sometimes as to the proper road to take, we could probably adjust such differences and continue on the way together, but when we set out to travel in different directions I cannot see how it is possible for us to be companions on the way," said Mr. Graham.

A motion requesting the directors to endeavor to affect a consolidation of the organizations of oil men in the state was adopted after considerable debate.

The electing of the directors chosen last night was anticipated. Copies of a ticket containing their names were printed in a short time after it was decided that members could vote by mail, and were sent to members of the organization.

STAND OF PROMOTERS.

The promoters of the association declared in favor of the disposition of government oil lands through a system of leasing, some of them believing such leases should be made on a comparative basis. They declared themselves opposed to the system which has been in effect under which have secured at practically no cost, thousands of acres of oil lands worth millions of dollars. The promoters declared it their opinion that such conditions were wrong. They stated they thought laws which would make seizure of the public domain impossible should be enacted.

Those who have gained control of the association declare Mr. Graham and his associates favored the withdrawal of government oil lands. Mr. Graham and his associates asserted this was untrue, and, moreover, declared in favor of restoring to use and development the lands that have been withdrawn. But a report to the contrary was circulated industriously, with the result that they lost control of the organization.

It is expected that other members whose views differ radically from those of the men now in control of the organization, will sever their connection with it, though it is impossible, of course, to approximate the number now.

OIL BEARING AREA SEEMS LIMITLESS

Recent developments in the California oil industry indicate that practically there is no limit to the area of oil-bearing lands in the great state. Each succeeding day the judgment of experts is upset by the bringing in of wells in territory that had been deemed not worthy of consideration in the feverish scramble to bring forth the precious fluid from the depths of mother earth.

Many oil operators of conservative judgment now admit that there are few acres of ground in the great oil belt from Coalinga to Sunset that they would stake their reputations on as not being oil-producing. Many experts now are of the opinion that the length of the state is underlaid with one vast sea of petroleum and that the development of the great industry has hardly begun.

Working on the generally accepted theory that petroleum is most plentiful wherever there were bays in the ancient sea which covered what is now the San Joaquin valley, many new companies are drilling in these highly prospective fields.

CASING PARTS IN BOYCHESTER WELL

COALINGA, Sept. 10.—In pulling the 8-inch casing of the Boychester, in which the water broke in after cementing, the casing parted and the drillers are now waiting for a casing spear.

The Continental Petroleum Company, 2-19-15, in which the Grahams are the principal owners, has five strings of tools going at the present time and the intention is to drill the property as quickly as possible. The Grahams have also secured property in the Midway field, adjoining the Equitable, and will start operations there in a short time.

A KING OF TANG.

There looms a lordly pleasure-tower
o'er yon dim shore,
Raised by some King of Tang.
Jade pendents at his girdle clashed, and golden bells
Around his chariot rang.

Strange guests through sounding halls at dawn go trailing by—
Gray mists and mocking winds;
To lash the ragged blinds.

The slow sun-dappled clouds lean down o'er waters blue,
Clear mirrored one by one,
Then drift as all the world shall drift,
The very stars
Their timeless courses run.

How many autumn moons have steeped those palace walls!
And paled the shattered beams!
What is their royal builder now? A lord or dust?
An emperor of dreams?

WHERE COST DOESN'T COUNT.

"I hear you are going to quit the grocery business," said the customer. "Is it true?"

"Is it," answered the grocer. "I'm tired of hearing men complain about high prices and grow about the expense of living."

"What are you going to do?" queried the customer.

"I'm going to start a saloon," answered the grocer.—From the Chicago News.

DANISH CONSUL HERE ON A PLEASURE TRIP

Says Mingling of Races Is Good Thing for the United States.

J. F. Boggild, Danish consul at San Francisco, came to Fresno on a short holiday trip yesterday. He registered at the Hughes, accompanied by Mrs. Boggild, and spent the day visiting members of the Danish colony here, including Dr. C. K. Kjaerbye. He came only a few months ago from Copenhagen, where he was for years connected with the Danish foreign office.

"One of the most interesting features of American life," remarked Mr. Boggild, who is a graduate of the Copenhagen university, "is the mixture of races that is going on. Certainly it is a good thing. America can assimilate all of the races coming here, and in fact this mixture will do much to build up a magnificent race. This is a simple proposition, proved again and again, that the mixture of races strengthens the inhabitants of a country.

"While in the east there are as many races commingling in America as there are out here in the west, the problem has interesting phases out here. The West needs new inhabitants, and the mixture of races will be a good thing for the country.

"There is considerable commercial intercourse between Denmark and the United States. There will be more when the Panama canal is finished. Then your California fruits will find a big market in Copenhagen and other Danish cities. The principal United States import from Denmark is hides. This country gets much of its hide supply from Denmark.

"I don't know whether it is generally realized or not, but the last tariff shut off to a great extent one import, the importation of white cabbages. These were shipped into the United States and sold all over the country. It is a peculiar sort of cabbage, resembling in some ways a cauliflower. The protective tariff, however, is too big a barrier for the cabbages at the present time.

"I simply came here on a holiday trip, allowed by the Admission Day festivities."

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—New Bedford won the New England League championship for the season of 1910, Lynn being the runner up. Worcester, champion of last year, finished third, Bowell fourth, Fall River fifth, Lawrence sixth, Haverhill seventh and Brockton last.

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE IS ORGANIZED FOR FALL CAMPAIGN

Jos. P. Bernhard Elected Chairman; Ray Baker Is Made Secretary.

Headquarters to Be Secured Immediately; To Fill Out Vacancies.

The executive committee of the Republican county central committee was formally organized last night and preparations were made for the beginning of the fall campaign for state and county officers.

Joseph P. Bernhard was unanimously chosen permanent chairman of the new organization and Ray W. Baker was elected secretary without opposition. Baker served on the old committee in the same capacity. The appointment of standing committees was left to the chairman and he will make his appointments within the next few days.

The chairman and secretary were also instructed to secure headquarters for the committee and the secretary will spend his entire time from now until election at these headquarters, devoting all his interests to the carrying on of the campaign.

At the recent Republican county convention a large number of the precincts of the county were not ready to choose members to the county central committee and consequently there are still a large number of vacancies. The chairman and secretary were instructed last night to fill the vacancies immediately. A meeting of the entire county central committee is planned within the next week or ten days at which time matters of vital interest to the campaign will be discussed. The time and place of the meeting will be announced later.

All nonpartisan candidates for office will be assessed 5 per cent of their first year's salary to meet the expenses which will be incurred by the central committee during the coming campaign.

NO SIRENS NEED APPLY

John D. Archbold indignantly denied that the Standard Oil men had employed a red headed beauty to cajole financial secrets from the company's enemies. They smiled at the people's attacks, They laughed at a Federal fine; They seldom get fussy When called octopussy— They know it was foolish to whine. But charge they are morally lax; And anger replaces their phlegm; They flout the aspersion With fevered assertion— No red headed siren for them.

She may be as lovely as sin, Her hair a Beelzebub's teal; Her lips something aural— But if she's not moral She's not in the Standardized set. Her eyes may be sapphires a-twin. But Puritan spirit is grim. No Titian blondie Can labor for John D.— No red headed siren for him.

Peace, Avenue Euclid the pure! Don't fire the benevolent John In fear he's been hikin' Some sunsetty siren His foe to be spying upon. He may make one lady a lure; But peace to your consciences prim! She's Money, the olden; Her tresses are golden— No red headed siren for him!

BENEFACTRESS HURT IN ESCAPE FROM MAN SHE HELPED

Laborer Uses Foreign Terms as Joke, Companion at Death's Door.

Tulare Schools Improved; Orange Situation Has Gloomy Outlook.

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 10.—Because he used foreign phrases the meaning of which he claims he did not know, Jacob Ernest lies in jail at Tulare. He is accused of having attempted an assault on Mrs. Ol Rodgers, who lives on the Hunsacker ranch, between this city and Tulare. Mrs. Rodgers, terrified by his words and actions, leaped from the rig in which they were seated and suffered injuries which may result fatally. Earnest, who is thought to be deficient mentally, does not appear to realize the seriousness of his actions, and when arraigned on a charge of attempted assault he treated the affair in a nonchalant manner.

Mrs. Rodgers and accepted a ride. Earnest was at work upon the Rodgers place and having finished was discharged yesterday afternoon. He started to walk to Tulare, where he has lived for some years. He was overtaken shortly afterward by Mrs. Rodgers, who was driving to town to do some shopping, and Earnest was given and accepted a ride. Mrs. Rodgers told the officers last night that shortly after Earnest climbed into the carriage, he made an insulting remark to her. As he was about to lay hands on her, she asserts, she jumped from the vehicle. Her clothing caught upon a projecting bolt and she fell heavily to the ground.

Mrs. Rodgers was shortly to become a mother and the shock of the fall was almost fatal. A few moments after the occurrence, Will Pine and Calvin Russell drove past and picked Mrs. Rodgers from the roadside, where she lay groaning and hurried her to the sanitarium in Tulare, where this morning she gave premature birth to her child. She is said to be in a dangerous state from the shock of losing the child as well as from the physical effects of the fall.

Earnest was arrested and given his preliminary hearing in court this morning. He pleaded not guilty and said in explanation that while he was at work upon the Rodgers ranch, he was taught a number of Portuguese phrases. He used some of these phrases to Mrs. Rodgers, he asserts, and says that if they were upon improper subjects, he was imposed upon by those who taught him.

Work has been completed upon the manual training and domestic science departments of the high school and were formerly accepted by the members of the board of education, after a tour of inspection which was made yesterday afternoon.

In the manual training room there have been placed twenty Sheldon benches, each having a complete individual kit of wood working tools. Larger tools, for the use of all the students, are in racks above the work benches. The work of the first year will consist of the method and theory of the proper sharpening of tools and the elements of cabinet making. During the last few weeks of the course, the students will be allowed to make articles of furniture which will be of practical use.

In th domestic science room there have been fitted six small but model kitchens with a full complement of utensils. It is stated by the superintendent that there have already been received applications enough to fill all the places in both rooms. Some of the graduates of the school and some of the housewives have also asked for places in the domestic science classes, but by reason of lack of equipment they cannot be allowed to enter this year.

Work of station 32 of the Porterville Northeastern railroad was suspended today by reason of a dispute between the railroad officials and the owners of the land, J. J. Doyle and Jack McFadden. It is alledeg by Mr. Doyle that he deeded the right to the lands in question by reason of an agreement upon the part of the railroad people that they would run the grades to follow certain lines specified by Mr. Doyle. This he claims is not being done. The dispute is being submitted to arbitration and it is assured that it will be settled without great inconvenience to the road builders.

Reports from all parts of this state indicate that the coming crop of oranges trees is to be quite as short as that of last year when the impossibility of getting the proper kind of stock retarded the development of this section. Fully 3,000 acres of lands were prepared for planting last year and then were left fallow waiting for navel and valencia stock. Frosts in the southern portion of this state this fall and the great demand for trees last year which cleaned up the available supply with no hold-over for the season of 1911, have given a gloomy outlook for the coming planting season.

In all probability a portion of the fall orange crop of the Porterville district this year will be harvested before there is the slightest danger of damage from frost, held in storage until the full color has developed and then held to await the very best price conditions.

Experiments were conducted last year at the Zante house, with just this idea in mind. It was found, upon comparison, that the sugar content of oranges picked here during the first week in November was fully equal to those of the southern district picked after the Christmas season. This shows that the oranges are sweet enough for the general market, color being the only lacking attribute. To ascertain the keeping quality, a box of standard pack was selected at random for a three carload lot and placed in the basement of the building. There was no attempt to regulate the temperature the only precaution taken being to see that the fruit was kept in a dry place.

In November the box was stored and was not opened until the following April. About five and one-half months later, the fruit was unwrapped, to find it in almost perfect condition, with not a spoiled or decayed orange in the case, every one in the box showing the desired red brick color, and as sweet as oranges which were allowed to remain on the trees. This is a remarkable showing and demonstrates that Porterville fruit may be picked early enough to avoid any possibility of injury from frost and then held to await the very best market conditions.

DAVENPORTS, NOTED PERFORMERS UNDER CANVAS, ARE TO CIRCUS WHAT DREW FAMILY IS TO DRAMA

MAE AND VICTORIA DAVENPORT.

To the circus, the name of Davenport is what Drew is to our native stage, Terry to the British and Coquelin to the French. For generations the Davenports have been famous performers under the big top. They are equestrians and have been experts on ring horses ever since the days when all circuses were "wagon shows" and the actors were riders, jugglers, coonshouters, acrobats, horses, mules and dogs.

In the Barnum & Bailey show which will appear in Fresno Thursday, September 15, there are three members of this illustrious family, and their part in the performance is of a sort to lend luster to a name already internationally famous. Orrin Davenport, if you except one old man long since retired, is the finest living horseback rider. Victoria Davenport, a slip of a girl not yet out of her 'teens, is the personification of winsome grace and sprightly, fairy-like agility. Mae Davenport, several years older, is as adept an equestrienne on a broad-backed galloper as any woman to be found in Europe or America. The three present an act which cannot be duplicated.

In the old days, when riding was the principal form of entertainment under canvas, bareback equestrians, because theirs was the most difficult work, took precedence over all other circus performers in salary, importance, privileges and billboard type. As the shows gradually increased and substituted spectacular representations and menageries to their repertoire, the bareback gentlemen retained their position and oftimes purchased interests in the business. Gradually there grew up a circus social register which time and custom made permanent so that today when "thrillers," trapeze artists, wondrous wire-walkers, the balloon horse, acrobats, tumblers and clowns are all crying for the chief honors of the show, the bareback equestrian remains perfectly safe in his stronghold. He is the star of the circus because time has made him so, and his sister or cousin is equally the queen.

Bareback riders have the choice of apartments in the sleeping cars, they can pick their places on the bill, it is up to them to choose whether or not they appear in the street parade and grand entrance, and they own their horses, a fact which brings their weekly salaries up to figures seldom touched by other artists.

Now that "Jimmy" Robinson, "Billy" Showles and Frank Melville are dead the names and rare abilities of this Davenport trio stacks out bigger than ever. They are fit representatives of the aristocracy of the circus and in their gracefully beautiful act embody all the charm and delight which cluster about our childhood recollection of the circus ring—good-natured, fat-backed, galloping horses, a ring-master snapping a long whip as if that was his only accomplishment in life, a splendid gentleman resplendent in silk tights, who turned marvelous pirouettes and somersaults on, up and over the good-natured horses and, best of all, the beautiful lady, resplendent in tinsel and spangles and tights and a very short skirt—a sweetly charming lady, who rode an equally good-natured horse and from his gently heaving back plunged daintily but daringly through paper-covered hoops, while the band played soul-stirring music and you munched your peanuts slowly and wonderingly, charmed at the grace and skill of the bareback riders.

Well, that is the kind of act Orrin Davenport and his two pretty sisters have in the Barnum & Bailey circus. They are proud of their name and proud of the position they occupy. The circus is equally proud of them.

INSANE YOUTH IS SENT TO STOCKTON

Aged Man Pleads Guilty to Improper Conduct and Is Released.

Eddie G. Thueson, a young man who resides near Selma, was committed to the Stockton state hospital yesterday by Judge Austin, after an examination for insanity. Young Thuesen came to the conclusion that clothes were a burden, and it was when he attempted to travel around in nature's garb that he was placed under arrest. He was examined by Drs. Couey and Hayden.

J. W. Rhode, the aged man who was arrested several days ago for unbecoming conduct toward a little girl, pleaded guilty to the charge yesterday before Judge Church. Being of feeble mind, Judge Church put him on probation and his son will take him to Fruitvale. He is to report monthly to the probation officer of Alameda county.

FRANK JOHNSON GETS FREEDOM ON PROMISE

Will Cleanse House and Five Children; Wife Is Still in Jail.

Frank Johnson appeared before Judge Graham yesterday morning to answer to a complaint sworn to by M W Betteridge.

Mr Bradeur appeared and stated that he had known the man for ten years. Johnson had been in his employ five years was a steady, hardworking man, but his fault was that he allowed his wife to handle the money when he did not control her.

When asked to plead guilty or not guilty, the defendant stand that after the statement of Mr Harvey and Dr. Long he supposed he had no defense to the charge. Then Mr. Harvey made the proposal to the defendant and the court.

"That the difficulty he had to contend with is: What is to become of the five children of the wife by a previous husband, who are now in a state of filth. He did not want to put them on the county or send them to the orphanage, because of the expense.

Dr. Long said he would not allow the children to be in the care of the mother, who was an unfit person to have their charge; if left to her their health would be in much danger, and possibly their lives. Under these circumstances Mr. Harvey proposed that the defendant be set free on the employer, who was willing to furnish bail, and that he spend the next two days in cleansing the house to the satisfaction of Dr. Long, washing the children and getting them decent clothes. If, when the trial comes on, which is fixed for next Thursday, the children are properly cleansed and clothed and the house put in a sanitary condition, he would ask the court to impose a minimum penalty, but with the wife, who is the principal culprit, he had no recommendation to make.

This was consented to by the defendant and Dr. Long promised to be out there Sunday and Monday to see how the children were being treated. Mrs. Frank Johnson is still in jail.

INCREASED POWER.
Cylinder bore increased from 4 1-4 inches to 4 1-2 inches. This, with more efficient carburetor (Schebler), which is water-jacketed, effects a material increase in power. Piston stroke, 4 1-2 inches. The four cylinders are cast singly, with copper jackets applied, retaining the exclusive Cadillac features throughout.

INCREASED COMFORT.
Wheel base increased from 110 to 116 inches, making the car ride easier than ever.

IMPROVED APPEARANCE.
Double drop frame, 2 1-2-inch drop, which makes car set lower, and this with the larger hood and more roomy tonneau greatly improves the appearance.

LARGE RADIATOR.
The radiator is slightly larger, hence has greater cooling capacity. This is notwithstanding the fact that the Cadillac was never deficient in that respect.

TIMKEN AXLE.

LARGER BRAKE DRUMS.
More powerful brakes, more easily applied and greatly increased efficiency. Contracting and expanding double-acting brakes, both equalized.

REMOVABLE CLUTCH.
Clutch may be removed in a very few minutes without disturbing other members.

TWO IGNITION SYSTEMS.
Two complete and independent ignition systems, each with its own set of spark plugs. The two ignition systems consist of Bosch high tension magneto and the new improved Delco system with single unit coil, high tension distributor and controlling relay. Either system alone is efficient for operating the car.

ENCLOSED WIRING.
All electrical wiring enclosed in copper tubes.

COPPER MANIFOLDS.

(Special to the Republican.)

TULARE, Sept. 10.—The Merchants turned the tables on the Drillers today, winning the second game of the series, 2 to 1. Griffin, the Bakersfield pitcher, lost a hard luck battle to Oscar Jones, as Tulare grabbed but one hit off Griffin. This lone bingo arrived in the last of the ninth and figured in the winning run. Walt Kuhn got the hit. Jones allowed five knocks, and he kept them well scattered. Tulare scored in the first and Bakersfield tied the count in the third when Carman smashed out a home run.

In the ninth, Kuhn led off with a one-base knock, and promptly stole second. Lynch walked. Bill Kelly sacrificed the pair. "Slim" Bath sent a long fly to left field and Kuhn started for the plate. The ball struck Umpire Patnott and the blonde backstop slid safely into the rubber. The umpire called Kuhn safe under the rules and the game was over. Manager Devereaux of the Bakersfield team protested the game on the ground that Kuhn should have been declared out. The protest will be filed with President Young of the league. The Merchants played errorless ball behind Jones, who struck out nine of the opposing batsmen and walked none.

Meikle and Buckles will be on the mound tomorrow in the final game of the season between the teams.

BREAK THREE AMERICAN RECORDS IN THE FIVE MILE GRIND

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—At Travers Island today the annual senior championship contests of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. were marked by the breaking of three American records in the five-mile run by George V. Bonhag of the Irish American A. C. and the failure of Melvin W. Sheppard to get away at the start of the first trial heat of the 440 yard race. Bonhag practically led all the way in the five-mile run which he won easily by a fifth of a mile in 25:09 1-5, a new American record.

The former record was made by E. C. Carter of the New York A. C. in 25:23 3-5 on September 17, 1887. Bonhag today made two other American records in the same race, the first being 20:11 for four miles, beating 20:15 4-5, made by the late William Day, twenty-one years ago, and the four and one-half mile record of E. C. Carter, made twenty-three years ago. Carter's time then was 22:59 4-5, but Bonhag today romped past the mark in 22:43 1-5.

AUTO RUNS OFF BRIDGE; DYE AND FEENEY ARE BADLY INJURED

VISALIA, Sept. 10.—Otto Dye, pitcher, and Tom Feeney, second baseman, of the Visalia ball team, were injured last night when an auto, in which they were returning from a trip to the oil fields, broke its steering rod and the machine ran off a bridge into a dry ditch. Dye suffered a bad wrench of a shoulder and scraped the skin off of one of his limbs. Feeney plowed up the dry bed with his face and one eye is swollen shut. Nate Lovelace, another occupant of the auto, sustained a sprained ankle. John Wegman was driving the machine and was held fast by the steering gear. Had the machine overturned he would probably have been seriously injured. The auto was traveling at the rate of about twenty-five miles an hour when the accident occurred.

It was about two miles west of Goshen and the quartet walked to the junction and telephoned for another car, by which they were brought to this city, arriving shortly after midnight. The auto is badly wrecked. It was the property of Lawrence Donovan of this city.

Dye says he is able to pitch against Hanford tomorrow, but Feeney may be out of the game.

GARRETT'S BENDERS BAFFLE OAKLAND BATSMEN

Willis Heaves Good Ball But Side-Kickers Hit the Ozone.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—Garrett's curves and twists could not be deciphered by the Oakland batters today and as a consequence they suffered a 2 to 0 shutout. Willis was pitching good ball for the trans-bay players, but his teammates behind him failed to strike their hitting stride. Willis struck out Garrett each of the three times that the Portland pitcher faced him.

It was the second inning that gave the Northerners victory. With two out Rapps was hit by a pitched ball and scored on Fisher's long triple to left. When Ort singled, Fisher registered. The score:

Last Monday the Kutners walloped the McAfees for their first taste of defeat. Today, the Hickmans will try to slip one over Ben Hill's champs in order to get a lookin at the top of the heap. U. C. VARSITY TEAM WINS FROM BARBARIANS IN OPENING GAME

BERKELEY, Sept. 10.—The 'varsity football team of the University of California defeated the Barbarian club team of San Francisco this afternoon in the first practice game of the season by a score of 9 to 0. Elliott, Allen, Watts and Stroud of last year's team, with McNeill and Dills, freshmen, executed many brilliant passing rushes. Hansen, Swartz and Jordan took the ball from the club men with ease. Peart substituted for Dwiggins at full.

The 'varsity game was preceded by the Olympic club's victory over the Freshman team by a score of 12 to 0. McKenzie, Gouddell, Sharp and Parker starred for the club against a fighting first year team that failed to work together. McClise at wing and Berglund at full back, for the freshmen, attracted attention.

The Swartz mentioned in the above dispatch is Burt Swartz, a Fresno boy, who starred in the big game between Berkeley and Stanford last winter. Swartz made the big team without effort and his spectacular playing attracted the attention of everyone who saw the annual struggle. This summer, Swartz invaded the Antipodes with the All-Star American Rugby fifteen.

YALE AND PRINCETON DIVIDE TENNIS HONORS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—Yale and Princeton divided this year's college lawn tennis honors, the Blue capturing the singles and the Orange and Black taking the doubles.

In the singles, R. A. Holden of Yale defeated A. H. Sweetzer of Harvard by 3 sets to 1 in a match replete with good playing.

Deane Mathey and B. I. Bell of Princeton experienced little difficulty in disposing of D. Evans, Jr., and F. Godine of Yale.

STOUTENBERG WINS FROM C. FRIEDELL

For a second time in two nights, Wilfred Stoutenberg, holder of the Pacific Coast championship, defeated Charley Friedell last night. On the opening night, Stoutenberg negotiated the mile in 2:58. ELECTION ENDS WAR IN FRATERNAL INSURANCE CO.

DENVER, Sept. 10.—After days of wrangling over who was entitled to credit for the growth of the order, the annual convention of the Fraternal Union of America today elected F. B. Rosse of Denver as president and decided to retain headquarters in this city. S. P. Rice of Dallas, Texas, was his opponent and the vote hinged largely upon the question of whether Rice had done more toward building up the order than any member of the old administration. It was reported that Rice if elected would remove the headquarters to Dallas, and this is believed to have had some influence upon the voting of the delegates. H. M. Waring of Omaha, member of Rosse's faction, was elected supreme vice-president over R. L. Couch of Dallas.

DOLAN'S THREE DAYS' SWIM.

Pat Dolan was a sailor man,
Aboard ov a sailin' ship.
One day the fore to-gallant sheet,
Began to tear and rip;
So Pat was sent to reef it in—
The phride ov the ship was he,
Whin he climbed the mast, he lost his holt,
And tumbled in the sea.

"Man overboard!" the sailors chried,
The skipper's voice it roared,
"Hi, there, ye lubbers, man a boat,"
And soon a boat was lowered—
"We've loslt the besht man in the crew,
And blast me bloomin' eyes,
I'll hang ye all for murdherers,
If Pathric Dolan dies."

Four hours they battled wid boundin' waves,
No thrace of him was found,
Wid heavy hearts, they all kem back,
Reportin' Pat was dhrowned,
In silent ghrief, the captain,
In the ship's log med enthree:
"May twenty, eighteen eighty-two,
P. Dolan. Lost at sea."

Two days they timbled and rolled about,
And thin a cam they had,
For one hull day they cleaned and fixed,
And the hearts ov all were sad.
Whin Dolan hit the wather, shure,
His elbow ghrazed the ship,
And his eye ketched sight ov a danglin' rope,
That soon was in his ghrip.

Thin up he wint, hand over hand,
Through a port-hole he was led.
"Be gorras, the private buttry
Of the captain, I'm in," he said.
He tuk a bottle ov precious wine,
And he broke its neck, bedad,
And he dhrank the hilth ov ivery friend
And rilative he had.

And thin, behind some boxes,

CHAMP. WOLGAST TO TAKE ON M'FARLAND

Pathrick shlumbered long and deep,
And whin the hunger waked him up,
There was slathers ov things to eat,
Three days Pat lived there like a prince,
And thin his conscience sphoke:
"You'd better get out ov here me buck,
Or you'll rue your little joke."

So, takin' his clothes completely off,
He slipped into the sea;
And whin his ship-mates saw him,
There was a shoutin' jubilee.
They flung him a rope, but his feeble arrums,
They couldn't bear his weight,
So they lowered a sthrappin' sailor down,
Be ordhers ov the mate.

And whin they got him on the deck,
He tumbled in a heap,
And his moans and ghroans would melt your heart,
They med the captain weep.
"Forgive me, Pat, for leavin' you,"
He said, "we thought you'd dhrowned,
We hunted the ocean over,
But not one ov you was found."

"Oh, captain, darlint," Pathrick said,
"'Tis a dyin' man I am,
I niver would ketched up to you,
If it wasn't for this cam."

ONLY 2 FAVORITES GRAB BACON AT ANACONDA

Thistle Bell and John Louis in Front; Aunt Polly a Long Shot.

ANACONDA, Sept. 10.—Thistle Bell and John Louis were the only favorites to score today. Miles won the feature race. He was always within striking distance of the leaders and when they went wide on the turn Coburn shot his mount through on the rail and outgamed Harlem Maid.

RESULTS

First race, five furlongs, selling—Bill Mayham, 5 to 1, won; Sir Barry, 8 to 5, second; Kinfolks, 3 to 2 third. Time 1:03 3-5.

Second race, five furlongs selling—Aunt Polly, 7 to 1, won; Themator, 3 to 1, second; Gene Wood, 10 to 1, third. Time 1:02 2-5.

Third race, 5½ furlongs, selling—Thistle Belle, 9 to 5, won; Begone, 6 to 1, second, Hamper, 4 to 1, third. Time 1:08 1-5.

Fourth race, Billings Handicap, one mile—Miles, 5 to 1, won; Harlem Maid, 11 to 5, second; Edwin T. Fryer, 6 to 2, third. Time 1:41 4-5.

Fifth race, mile and 70 yards, selling—John Louis, 4 to 5, won; Tug Boat, 8 to 1, second; Charlie Doherty, 10 to 1, third. Time 1:46 3-5.

Sixth race, 6 furlongs, selling—Jack O'Lantern, 10 to 1, won; Waner, 4 to 1, second; McNally, 4 to 1, third. Time 1:16 1-5.

IF SO, WHERE?

There is a problem which impels
Me oftentimes to stop
And watch the lobby in hotels—
The bar—the barber shop—
All places where the guests abound;
Yet still I ask, enraged;
Is anybody ever found
When he
Is Paged?

You calmly sit consuming beer,
Or dallying with cheese,
A Buttons hollers in your ear:
Misterrr Gazzookus, please!"
In vain: The latter's hidden, drowned,
Or otherwise engaged.
Is anybody ever found
Is Paged?

The bellboys come, the bellboys go,
Their hope undying seems.
"Misterrrr Mellaggis, Doctor Doe!"
(Poor lads!—respect their dreams!)
Through heartless space their voices sound
Till they grow worn and aged.
Is anybody ever found
Is Paged?

EWING REITERATES REFUSAL TO RUN FOR CONGRESS

HAWSON NOT NOMINEE

Attorneys Declare He Never Was Nominated; Say No One Can Be Chosen.

Notwithstanding the fact that David B. Ewing was the recipient yesterday of several telegrams sent at the request of the Democratic County Central Committee, urging him to make the race for Congress from the sixth district against James C. Needham, Ewing declared positively yesterday afternoon that he would not enter the contest.

"I appreciate the fact that it would be an honor," said the attorney, "but I know my own business and I cannot and will not run."

The untimely end of the Ewing boom which the members of the Democratic committee predicted would sweep this district, threw the members of the committee into complete consternation yesterday and "divided the house against itself."

While the endorsement was unanimous, several members of the committee asserted yesterday that they were not for Ewing and upbraided the others for proposing him.

Secretary Hughes of the central committee stated yesterday that an effort would be made when the congressional committee meets, probably Friday, to have Ewing nominated for the office despite his refusal to run and despite the fact that his candidacy will cause dissension in the ranks of the Democrats. The committeemen were censured yesterday by a number of prominent Democrats for suggesting Ewing and also for the manner in which they sought to have him accept.

Lawyers now have mixed into the much mixed Democratic congressional situation and it is, as a consequence, more tangled than ever. Several lawyers, now contend that it will be impossible under the law for the Democrats to make a nomination for Congress in the sixth district. They contend that the fact that Hawson is ineligible under the Constitution for the office of Representative in Congress, he not having been a citizen of the United States seven years, it necessarily follows that he is ineligible to receive the nomination for such office, on the theory of the legal maxim that the greater includes the less. If he has not been nominated, he can not withdraw, as there is in his case nothing to withdraw from. It is contended that the case is the same as if no nomination had been made. It should be remembered that no name of a Democratic candidate for Congress in this district was printed on the primary ballot, all votes that were cast were written by the voter, thus showing that the Democratic party really had no candidate for this nomination. Those voters who wrote on the ballot the name of Hawson voted for a man ineligible for the office, consequently ineligible for the nomination to said office, therefore no nomination was made, reason the lawyers.

The primary law provides, Section 25, "Vacancies occurring after the holding of any primary election shall be filled by the party committee of the city, county, city and county, district or state, as the case may be."

If there was no legal nomination, certainly there has been no vacancy that has occurred after the primary, and the case is again as if no nomination had been made.

Again the primary law provides, "Each party candidate nominated for Representative in Congress may, not later than Tuesday, three weeks after the primary election, appoint a congressional district committee, which committee shall consist of not less than one nor more than three members from each Assembly district in such congressional district. Such committee, if any, shall serve for the term of two years."

It is held that as there is no legal district, there is no one who can appoint the committee, as above provided, for in fact, it is stated on the best of authority that Hawson did not appoint such a committee, and there has been no such committee named.

The primary law also provides as follows: "The various officers and committees now in existence shall exercise the powers and perform the duties herein prescribed until their successors are chosen in accordance with the provisions of this act."

The Democratic party of the sixth district has no congressional committee in that district, so it is stated by prominent Democrats, consequently it appears that even if it be admitted that there is a vacancy in the Democratic congressional nomination in the sixth district which occurred after the primary, there is no committee such as the primary law contemplates in existence empowered to fill the vacancy.

Under these circumstances, lawyers who have studied the situation in the sixth district, contend that the Secretary of State must hold that no nomination has been made by the Democratic party in the sixth district, and if the Democrats pretend to make a nomination the Secretary of State must ignore it.

FRESNANS TO SPEAK BEFORE REALTY MEN

Saunders and Hawson on San Jose Program; Leas Out for Secretary.

Secretary S. B. Leas of the Fresno real estate board yesterday received a telegram announcing that Henry Hawson and W. E. G. Saunders of this city have been placed on the program of the convention of the California State Realty Federation, to be held in San Jose Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Saunders is to speak on Thursday. Hawson is to be on the Saturday morning program.

The Fresno delegation plans to go to San Jose in strong force, leaving here Wednesday evening or Thursday morning, many of the men going by machine. S. B. Leas, the local secretary, is to be run for secretary of the state organization against Herbert Burdette of Los Angeles, incumbent.

Hawson's subject will be: "Equitable Taxes vs. Inequitable Licenses."

PACKERS ADVISE TRADE TO HOLD OFF ON DRIED FRUITS

Armsby Sends Out Letter Boosting Raisin and Peach Game Here.

More information on the why and wherefore of present conditions in the raisin market was circulated on the Row yesterday, to the effect that a certain faction of influential packers here is now sold short and is advising jobbers [illegible] to hold off for some time, counting on the two weeks' early crop to break the sweatbox market. This is ascribed as a leading reason for the jobber now soldiering on the job. That no cheaper prices than those obtaining will be confirmed by the bearing packers, however, is said to be weakening their position. Further, it is stated to be absolutely certain that two more weeks of a solid market will force the jobber to buy freely for the holiday trade, and even less time may force one of the short packers into a [illegible].

That the same early crop factor, combined with a long tonnage, was expected to break the peach market, and signally failed to do so, is now being pointed out. Very few peaches are now left of about a 30,000 ton crop—possibly the largest the state has ever had. More peaches have been sold so far this year, early as it is in the season, than in whole seasons past.

A leading reason for the excellent demand that raisins and peaches have found is that the Eastern people made money on both commodities last year. It is sending them back for more this season.

STOCKS NEARLY NIL.

Stocks on wholesalers and retailers' shelves are still abnormally low. Besides, an increased demand is reported. As an illustration, the representative of a big Middle Western house who was on this coast early in the year, bought one car of seeded raisins for September delivery, expecting this to last him for the Thanksgiving trade, and figuring on buying one more car in November for Christmas trading. In the end, he had the first car sent on in August, and had to have another before Thanksgiving. This means another one, at least, for the Christmas sales.

The J. K. Armsby Company has just sent out its weekly letter to its brokers along the line. The letter, as it deals with dried fruits, is as follows:

DRIED FRUITS.

"The past week has shown a big increase in the volume of business in raisins and prunes, with the latter fruit more closely cleaned up than has ever been the case for years at a corresponding date; in fact, we don't remember a season when there were so few unsold prunes January 1st as is the case today and we are only at the beginning of the new season.

"The movement of raisins, as indicated by the returns of the various transportation companies, compares very favorably with that of former years, and when the returns for August and September shipments are obtainable we believe that figures will show the heaviest movement of this fruit during the first nine months of any year of which we have record.

RAISIN STATISTICS.

Comparative shipments of raisins for seven months 1907-10, via rail and via steamer:

	1907 Tons	1908 Tons	1909 Tons	1910 Tons
January	1,217	2,365	4,033	3,332
February	1,286	1,865	5,227	3,195
March	1,290	1,520	3,786	3,343
April	491	958	2,175	1,585
May	480	656	1,589	1,998
June	342	923	1,964	3,017
July	249	983	1,164	2,429
Total	5,355	9,260	19,938	18,899

"With every prospect of a further European demand for seedless, with a crop in California fully 25 per cent short of last year's and the European crop very much less, a record breaking consumptive demand, high and advancing prices for currants, and the fact that our prices are reasonable, raisins are, we believe, a good purchase at present values.

"Prunes, apricots, pears and all dried fruits other than peaches or raisins are practically cleaned up and business on such commodities from now on must necessarily be of small volume. Raisins and peaches are still obtainable in quantities at fair prices and the jobbers who are doing the business are the ones who are pushing these goods, making their profits and forgetting the unfortunate fact that they played the apricot and prune game for a decline which never came. The jobbers who are expecting peaches and raisins to go down in price before purchasing freely may find themselves at the end of the season "still waiting" and their competitors doing the business."

CHIEF ATTRACTIONS OF STATE FAIR TO BE SEEN HERE

Principal Towns of Valley Show Keen Interest in Fresno Fair.

"Fresno's fair, scheduled for October 3rd to 8th inclusive, took a long step forward the past week," said Secretary Powell to a Republican reporter last night. "The majority of our board of directors and I were at the State Fair most of the week. I have no hesitation in saying that our trip was most successful from every standpoint. True we did not close a deal with Hamilton, the manbird, but we took less money than he demanded and procured many fine attractions. In the line of exhibits through the untiring efforts of President Warlow, Vice President Dickinson, Mr. Farris, Mr. Eberhardt and myself I can assure the patrons of the Fresno fair that the exhibits in every department will far surpass anything ever seen in Central California.

"One of the very pleasing features we secured was the Vaquero Club of Los Angeles. This is composed of wealthy horsemen who regale themselves as Spanish dons of old, and with their fancy trappings for their horses, together with their horseback drilling, make a sight more than pleasing and one long to be remembered. This feature will add great interest to the Women's Riding Club of Sanger, who will be with us all the week. The two features combined we consider a splendid card.

"We are all greatly pleased at the hearty manner in which our sister towns in the valley are responding to our invitation to join us on this occasion in order that we may show the world in general and the Danish Brotherhood of America in particular what the San Joaquin valley can produce. They are soon to realize, just as our directors do, that this is the opportunity of a lifetime, and I repeat we are delighted with the support being given us. Sanger, Reedley, Fowler and Selma in Fresno county are collecting their exhibits. Madera will not be outdone by any town in the valley, for her citizens have taken hold of the matter in a spirit that plainly indicates that the citizens of that city propose to keep in the front rank. We have an appointment to meet the citizens of Dinuba Monday night and from what I know of Dinuba's people we are already counting on Dinuba to show something fine. The matter has been taken up with Hanford also, and I am confident she will fall in line, as well as Modesto, Tulare, Visalia, Bakersfield, Coalinga and other towns.

"Indeed I may say," said Secretary Powell, "that Fresno never had such bright prospects for a week of festivity as are now in sight. The fair will be a success from start to finish."

"Representatives from all the fraternal orders in Fresno are expected to meet at Judge Smith's court room this afternoon at 4 o'clock, at which time definite arrangements will be made for Fraternal Order Day and for the drill contests between their teams, for which the directors will offer handsome cash prizes, both for the men's and women's teams.

"It will be definitely known by the middle of the week how many labor unions will take part on Fresno Labor Day. The various unions are voting on the question and from all indications every union in Fresno will be represented and their numbers greatly augmented by outside unions. The directors are counting on this to be Fresno's red letter day.

"All in all, the prospects for a first class fair are indeed bright. Premium books are being sent broadcast and entries are coming in as rapidly as could be wished. A gang of men will be put to work at once clearing up the grounds and in a couple of weeks fair matters will be humming."

The Fresno Republic

VOL. XXXVIII—NO. 73. FRESNO, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1910. 24 PAGES—FIRST TYPE

WILL BREAK CONTROL OF LEGISLATURE BY MACHINE COMMITTEES

Desperate Effort to Beat Wallace Fails; Senate Will Be Free.

Leavitt's Domination of the Public Morals Committee Comes to End.

BY FRANKLIN HITCHBORN.

Mr. Phil A. Stanton, in a circular letter issued during his primary campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, states that during the four terms of his service in the Assembly, 6,200 bills were introduced, of which 2,400 became laws. Mr Stanton says further that the total time consumed in consideration of these measures was less than 250 days.

It is evident that such a mass of proposed legislation, much of it dealing with the most difficult problems, cannot, under the most favorable conditions, be given adequate consideration. That the many measures may be given even passing consideration, standing committees are appointed by both houses, to which all bills, as they are introduced, are referred. Thus, all measures which affect corporations go to the committee on corporations, bills involving legal questions go to the judiciary committee, bills dealing with prisons go to the committee on prisons and reformatories, and so on. Practically all of the first half of every session is devoted to committee consideration of bills.

To make the work of these committees effective, they are given powers which make each one of them a sort of miniature legislature. Once a bill is referred to a committee, neither Senate or Assembly can act upon it until the committee reports it back, or the referring body recalls it by resolution. The recalling of a bill is, however, a difficult and unusual process, which has usually failed on the rare occasions in which it has been attempted.

Under the rules of the last Senate, Senate committees were given practically unlimited time to report back bills once referred to them.

The Assembly rules required committees to report back bills within ten days after their conference. But this rule was openly ignored. For example, the Commonwealth Club bills, aimed at correction of the abuses that have crept into the practice of criminal law in this state, were referred to the Assembly judiciary committee on January 15th. Under the rules they should have been reported back by January 25th. As a matter of fact they were never reported back. Such illustration could be continued indefinitely.

Thus a committee by delaying its report on a bill, or neglecting to make any report at all, can handicap and even prevent the passage of a measure. On the other hand, by promptly reporting back for consideration of the main body, a committee can materially advance a measure's passage.

Under this system, it will be readily seen, control of the committees means control of the legislature.

This being the case, the "machine" has always aimed to control the legislative committee. The personnels of the important committees that have shaped legislation in this state during the life time of most of us, is the best evidence of the "machine's" success. This is well illustrated by the several Senate committees on public morals. To this committee is referred all measures dealing with moral issues. Machine control of the committee has been necessary from the machine's point of view, to prevent the passage of measures adverse to race track gambling. The several Senate committees on public morals, for the last four sessions, have been as follows:

Committe of 1907—Irish of Plumas, Leavitt of Oakland, Lynch of San Luis Obispo, Wolfe of San Francisco, Kennedy of San Francisco.

Committe of 1909—Weed of Shasta, Wolfe of San Francisco, Leavitt of Oakland, Savage of San Pedro, Kennedy of San Francisco.

It will be noted that Leavitt served on all the committes. Senator Leavitt was long the business associate of those interested in the Emeryville race course. Senator Wolfe, who sat on the committees of 1907 and 1909 is an associate of the same element. Bauer, Tyrrell, Welch and Kennedy are typical San Francisco members. O'Neal is a Santa Clara politician and Southern Pacific attorney. With perhaps one or two exceptions, the other members of the several committees stack up about the same as those who have been named.

The influence of the Senate committee on Public Morals upon questions affecting the moral well-being of the State was well illustrated in 1907. That year, the Assembly passed the Eshleman anti-race-track gambling bill. In the Senate, the measure was referred to the Public Morals committee. The committee refused to report the bill back for Senate action. A resolution to compel the committee to act was defeated. The committee held the bill until the Legislature adjourned. In this way the Senate was denied opportunity to act, and the passage of the bill was prevented.

The Senate committees are appointed by the lieutenant-governor, who is an ex officio president of the Senate. This accounts for the strenuous fight which the machine made to prevent the nomination of the Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League candidate for lieutenant-governor, A. J. Wallace of Los Angeles.

The Assembly committees are appointed by the Speaker of the Assembly.

Heretofore the machine has controlled the lieutenant-governor and Speaker.

The nomination of Mr. Wallace removed the last hope of the machine that it would control the President of the next Senate; the Independent element of the Assembly bid fair to name the next Speaker.

Scene from the sparkling comedy, "Seven Days," soon to come to the Barton.

With the open door policy, the Barton this season will secure practically the attractions that are playing the coast, irrespective of the management under which they are playing. The problem the local theatrical owners of Fresno has seen for at least five years. When Klaw & Erlanger had the exclusive booking privilege of the Barton they offered such shows as they controlled and refused to permit any other attractions to appear with their associated trust. Of course, the Fresno public cared nothing about the theatrical war, only regretting that Fresno lost some good shows as a consequence.

With the approaching dissolution of the booking trust, Barton took matters in his own hands, wrote to all the managers offering dates and has secured, as stated, the best bookings in years. Open shop, open door has proved a success.

In the meantime John Cort secured control of all one-night stands, and Barton has a five year contract with him by which he will obtain all these shows. While this year Barton has most of them independently booked, the Cort contract makes him master of the theatrical situation in Fresno for the next half decade at least.

Frances Starr's engagement at the Barton opera house on Tuesday, September 13th, will reveal her in a role widely different from that in which she first won fame under the direction of David Belasco, her impersonation of a Spanish maiden in "The Rose of the Rancho," which is delightfully remembered by playgoers for its charming archness; but she has a far more exacting part in Laura Murdock of "The Easiest Way"—a part which demands the winning of sympathy for a character possessing few of those traits which commend themselves to the theatergoers. Laura Murdock is essentially weak, an unusual creature, and as wedded to luxury and the pleasant way of living that she is willing to make any sacrifice to gratify her desires. When the play opens, the heroine is faced with an opportunity to begin a new and better life.

"The Easiest Way" depicts that aspect of New York life which is concerned with the tragedy of those women who love ease and pleasure above all else and will pay any price for their enjoyment. The theme is handled in a serious and convincing manner. Eugene Walter has painted with a strong brush a certain phase of New York life, and little is omitted in emphasizing the hollowness of that life. The intensely dramatic situations are relieved by exceptionally bright comedy incidents. While tragic in part, it is far from a gloomy play. In view of the fact that "The Easiest Way" is produced by David Belasco, there is little necessity to dwell upon the perfection and artistry of its settings. The first act discloses a scene of exquisite beauty, the rolling foothills of the Eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains radiant in the golden light of the afternoon sun. Widely contrasting but none the less faithful in its photographic reality is the second act, showing a room in a typical side-street theatrical boarding house; and this is followed by the superb settings of the third and fourth acts showing a drawing room in an apartment of an ultra-expensive New York hotel. Mr. Belasco has given Miss Starr a supporting company in every way worthy of her own remarkable acting, while the scenery of the four acts maintains that high standard of beauty and realistic for which he has so long been famous. Miss Starr's supporting company includes Joseph Kilgour, Edward H. Robins, John P. Brawn, Louise Randolph, and Violet Rand.

"LOTTERY MAN."

It would appear to be an "open season" for good farces. One of the most amusing and prosperous farces, by the way, which New York saw last season, was "The Lottery Man." After six months in New York the Shuberts are sending the piece on a tour of their theaters and they have wisely decided to keep the original cast intact.

"The Lottery Man" is known by that particular title because the principal character decided to raffle himself off as a husband at a dollar a throw to any one who will buy a coupon in a newspaper scheme that means several thousand dollars, as well as wedding bells for the winner. The young man in question is a reporter on the New York Examiner, who, having borrowed $1,000 of his chief, sees no way of paying it back. Thereupon, he hits upon the plan of raising funds by means of a lottery. Strangely enough, the reporter has never thought of marrying before. As soon as the plan is announced, and 300,000 old maids send in a dollar each, the journalist falls in love. Then everybody who knows the pair is kept busy buying coupons in order to keep the reporter in the family. The young lady, however, is not acquainted with these facts. When she knows that her numerous friends are literally endeavoring to buy a husband for her, she resents their mistaken kindness. To tell who wins the young man, and to detail the complications that follow, the publication of the lucky number, would in a measure rob theatergoers of the enjoyment of following the story to the end.

Rida Johnson Young, the author of the piece, weaves a pleasing vein of sentiment in the story, in the devotion of a sensible little mother to her son, and conveys a charming contrast with another mother who also has a son and who has a mistaken notion that her devotion to the beauty doctors will hold his affection, whereas all the time he is longing for the real, homely sort of mother love. And the dieting, boning woman, a decidedly healthy looking specimen, addicted to transformations and tight lacing, provides the means for some of the greatest laughter in the piece through her association with a poor, weak, anaemic spinster who acts as the "dog," having to try all sorts of obesity pills and other remedies for corpulency in order to assure her patron as to their quality. As a satire on one of the fads and follies of the day, nothing could be funnier, and the play succeeds in driving home much wholesome philosophy through the healthy-minded mother of the fresh young hero of the piece. The three contrasted women are excellently played.

Mr. William Rosell is the reporter; Vivia Ogden, the spinster; Sadie Harris, the girl in the case; Luela Moore, the lovable mother; Florence Robertson, the stout mother who goes in for obesity pills, and May Donohue, an Irish physical culturist.

"The Lottery Man" will be the attraction at the Barton Opera House

THIS YEAR'S FOREST FIRES MOST SEVERE IN YEARS; LOSS BIG

Forest Service Tells of Methods of Checking Incipient Blazes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Officials of the United States Department of Agriculture are of the opinion that 1910 will hold the record among many years for the severity of the losses from forest fires. The summer fires followed a spring season believed to have been the worst, certainly in the lake states, known for a long time. Nor is it wise to assume that the danger is over when the fierce conflagrations which have called forth in the mountain states the efforts of three federal departments have been conquered. The forests will not be safe until the fall rains and snows have once more made a wet blanket on the dry forest floor. That the total losses of the year will run up to many millions of dollars is considered certain.

How much losses may be prevented is a matter of general public concern. To the national forest timber burned must be added great amounts on state and private holdings, besides the immense damage done to town, farm and other property. Railroads have suffered from the interruption of traffic as well as from direct losses. A bulletin by Forester Henry S. Graves discussing forest fires and the proper methods of preventing and fighting them, as follows:

"In some sections of the country forest fires have always been of such common occurrence that there is a popular notion that they cannot be prevented. The risk from fires can never be entirely eliminated, for in a forest there is always inflammable material which is very easily ignited. They may, however, be largely prevented, and under efficient organization their damage may be kept down to a very small amount. The problem is like that in cities, where fires can never be entirely eliminated, but where the risk of loss to property may be reduced almost to significance."

The importance of systematic provision for the early discovery of fires and for getting a properly equipped force of fire fighters quickly to the scene of an outbreak is insisted upon by Forester Graves. "A careful supervision or patrol during the dry season," he says, "is one of the most important measures in organized fire protection. One of the fundamental principles in fire protection is to detect and attack fires in their incipiency." After pointing out the value of lookouts, telephone or signal communication and various methods of patrol, the forester tells how to fight fires, as follows:

"The principles of fighting forest fires are essentially the same as those recognized in fighting fires in cities. The following are of vast importance: (1) Quick arrival at the fire; (2) an adequate force; (3) proper equipment; (4) a thorough organization of the fighting crew, and (5) skill in attacking and fighting fires. Quick access to fires is accomplished through the work of supervision and patrol in discovering fires before they have gained much headway, and by a well-developed system of communication through the forest by roads and trails.

"A small fire may be put out by one man, but in extensive forests several hours may pass before the fire can be reached. It is important to secure an adequate force of men and to get them to the fire quickly. In a well-organized system of patrol the guard who discovers a fire communicates quickly to other guards and to headquarters by telephone, signal or other means, and indicates the number of men he needs.

"The efficiency of the fire-fighting

EASTERN QUOTATIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Evaporated apples are in moderate demand on the spot with prices unchanged.
Fancy, 10½@11½c; choice, 8¾@9½c; prime, 8@8½c; common to fair, 6@7½c.
Coast advices report a very strong situation in prunes, but local spot quotations show no improvement ranging from 3½ to 10c for California fruit up to 30-40c and from 5 to 9½ for Oregons.
Apricots unchanged. Choice, 10½@11½c; extra choice, 11½@12½c; fancy, 12@13½c.
Raisins firm. Loose Muscatels, 3½@5¾c; choice to fancy seeded, 5@6¼c; seedless, 4¾@5½c; and London layers, $1.20@1.25.
CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Liquidation said to be largely for a prominent speculator who was a big factor in the July wheat trade, and who changed his July holdings to December, weakened prices today. A scarcely less important cause was sympathetic decision with corn, predicted frosts having failed to do any serious damage. The finish in wheat was ¾ to ⅞c under last night's figures; corn showed a net loss of ¾ to 1⅛@1½c and oats ¼@⅝c. Latest quotations for hog products were at 1½c advance to 2½c decline. Raiding by elevator concerns and by professional speculators had a share in pulling down wheat prices. Bulls were somewhat taken off their feet temporarily by private cable dispatches to the effect that Russia was offering wheat at figures equal to 1½@8c under Chicago. It was not until some time later when an adequate explanation exceptionally poor quality of Russian was made.
Further assurances came in the shape of a report that twenty boat loads had been delivered for export at the Atlantic seaboard. December ranged from 99⅛c to $1.00⅛, with final sales at 99⅝c to 99⅝@⅞c, a net loss of ½@⅝c to ⅞c. Indications that frost danger had passed for the time being took the prop from under the corn market. December fluctuations were between 64⅛ and 65⅝c with the close steady at 64⅞ to 64⅝@⅞c, with a net loss of 1¾ to 1⅞@2c. The cash market was weak. No. 2 yellow closed at $7@$7¼c.
The week's receipts for oats were the smallest in four years for this season. December varied from 34⅝ to 34¾c, closing ⅛@⅜c down at 34⅜@⅝c. Dealers in provisions were slow to follow any advance. Prices closed 2½ to 5¼c up for pork, 3½ to 3c higher for lard and 3½c loss to 2½@6c gain for ribs.

Barley steady. December, $1.05; May, $1.11¼; cash, $1@1.08¼.
Corn steady.

ST. LOUIS.—Wool steady. Medium grade combing and clothing, 23@24c; light fine, 22c; heavy fine, 17c; tub washed, 28@32c.

NEW YORK.—Raw sugar steady. Muscovado, 89 test, $3.86; centrifugal, 96 test, $3.56; molasses sugar, 89 test, $3.61. Refined sugar steady—Cut loaf, $5.85; crushed, $5.85; mould, $5.50; cubes, $5.40; XXXX powdered, $5.30; powdered, $5.25; granulated, $5.15; diamond, $5.15; confectioners, $4.95; No. 1, $4.90; No. 2, $4.85; No. 3, $4.80; No. 4, $4.75; No. 5, $4.70; No. 6, $4.65; No. 7, $4.60; No. 8, $4.55; No. 9, $4.50; No. 10, $4.40; No. 11, $4.35.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The sentiment of satisfaction over the immediate financial outlook which is gathered by inquiry finds its only reflection in the stock market in the absence of selling pressure. The handful of stock which changed hands during the day's session is a demonstration of the stagnant demand.
The present strength of the money position in New York is felt to be due to the restraint of the stock market for several months past. The desirability of conserving money resources for the fall is a prime factor in the present stagnation of the stock market. Returns to the controller shows that the New York national banks expanded loans nearly $30,000,000 from June 3 to September 1, but rediscounted for interior banks and commercial accommodation were responsible for this and not stock market credits. It is significent that funds of out-of-town banks are appearing in New York gain to be placed in collateral loans.
The rapid marketing of new grain, it is believed, is supplying resources to farmers for liquidation of loans in land and automobile purchasers and the favorable effect is looked for in the returns of national banks of condition on September 1, which are no wbeing compiled by the controller.
The British treasury today redeemed $20,000,000 of its bills and next week will redeem $25,000,000, thus returning to the money market part of the plethoric government deposits in the Bank of England. Any need of gold in New York will be facilitated by this condition.
Predicted frosts in the corn belt having failed to appear there was a decline in the market. The surplus of idle freight cars showed another contraction. Another decline in Union Pacific convertible bonds with an advance in the stock was considered to be designed to corrupt a disparity in the proportionate prices of the two securities. The August Dec. of 433,805 tons in the unfilled orders on hand of the United States Steel Corporation, compared with the falling off during July of 286,863 tons was not known on the stock exchange until just at the close of the day. The actual showing of the bank statement was closely in agreement with prelaminary estimates.
Bond irregular. Total sales par value $620,50.

THE FRENCH STATE "UNCLE."

Is our old friend, the Mont de Piete, losing its popularity? asks our Paris correspondent. It would seem so. Its volume of business has shrunk considerably. The poor people still go to "ma tante," but the better-off class have become shy of it. It is rare now to find pictures of value, silver, and the rest confided to the care of the state pawnbroker. One of the reasons is that "my aunt" is rather a niggardly person, and her advances are small. The private money lender has arisen, which is much more accommodating and possibly more discreet. In any case, the Mont de Piete is losing touch with its better class of customers. Oddly enough, the current of affairs is always larger in the prosperous years. This is because the small manufacturer and "little man" has need of funds for carrying out his orders; hence, he goes to his avuncular relative for the advance. When there are no orders, there is less need for the advance. The Mont de Piete having realized the effects of competition will, no doubt, improve its terms.—From the Pall Mall Gazette.

A MODEST REQUEST

"If you please, sir," said the new convict, addressing the governor of the prison, "I should like to be put to my own trade." "Certainly," said the stern but kindly official. "I'll see that it is done. What is your trade?"
"I'm an aviator, sir," murmured the latest arrival.—London Globe.

next Sunday night, September 18th. The advance sale of seats will open Thursday morning.

COMEDY HIT "SEVEN DAYS."

Sometimes superlatives are justified. Take for example "Seven Days." Now it might be said of this play that it is a comedy by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, at present in the second year of its run at the Astor theater in New York, with a record of six months in Chicago and that the Wagenhals & Kemper Company will present at the Barton Monday and Tuesday, September 19th and 20th.
That bare announcement would tell the story to a great many persons who know all about "Seven Days," what it is and what it has done. But wouldn't it serve the general public better to say it is a "laughing wonder," and "indescribably amusing," taking the New York Times as authority for these assertions? And wouldn't the public like to know that this play keeps its audience in paroxysms of laughter—"laughter all the time"? That, too, from the same newspaper. Such things as these prove that "Seven Days" is entitled to superlatives. They have to be employed to give an idea of the comedy. Adolph Klauber, the eminent dramatic critic of the New York Times, a conservative newspaper, said of "Seven Days": "It is excruciatingly funny—a laughing wonder. There is laughter all the time. It is exceptionally bright and attractive, without a dull moment."
It isn't often that Mr. Klauber lets himself go with enthusiasm like this, which proves that "Seven Days" is far out of the ordinary. But surely everybody must know about "Seven Days," and just so surely will see it at the Barton during the two nights' run next week, September 19th and 20th, when this excruciatingly funny comedy will be seen with a brilliant New York cast and a production of rare beauty, both of the kind for which Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper are noted.

MARGARET ILLINGTON.

Margaret Illington who will come to the Barton Opera House on Thursday, September 29th, presenting for its initial production in this city her great French drama, "Until Eternity," will play her annual engagement in New York which will be made at the Maxine Elliott in this same play in which she is said to have found the greatest success of her career.
Since Margaret Illington's temporary withdrawal from the stage two years ago, those who have enjoyed the privilege of seeing her brilliant work with John Drew in "His House in Order," and later as star at the head of her own company in "The Thief," have been patiently waiting the time when she would return to the stage.

"HER HUSBAND'S WIFE."

Henry Miller who has not been seen in this city since his last appearance in "The Great Divide," will come here during the next few weeks to present his New York and Chicago hit, "Her Husband's Wife." The latest Miller success is in striking contrast to "The Great Divide." It is a light, sparkling, witty comedy of manners, somewhat similar in treatment to Moliere's celebrated play, "La Malade Imaginaire." It narrates the adventures of a young wife who fancies herself at the portals of death, six physicians to the contrary notwithstanding. The young woman is less dismayed at the thought of impending dissolution than by the haunting fear that after her demise her young husband will have no one to look after him, so she decides he must have a second wife, and determines to select that individual herself. This remarkable scheme results in a kaleidoscopic series of deliciously amusing domestic entanglements. Mr. Miller plays the part of a Westerner whose keen sense of humor plunges him into the thick of the swiftly-generated contretemps. He is still supported by the brilliant cast seen during the New York and Chicago runs.

"THE CHORUS LADY."

Rose Stahl comes to the Barton Opera House October 1st and 2nd. Saturday and Sunday, in the successful comedy "The Chorus Lady," by James Forbes, author of "The Commuters" and "The Traveling Salesman," in which she has delighted audiences from coast to coast. Miss Stahl has scored many triumphs as Patricia O'Brien, queen of the chorus, and during the past season she presented the play for 100 nights in London and was received with the utmost enthusiasm, making the greatest hit ever achieved by an American star in England. It is scarcely necessary to retell the story of "The Chorus Lady" to Fresno playgoers. Suffice it to say that the play deals with a chorus girl who in vernacular and bearing is like the magazine type of coryphees, but who is at least a very wise and very good girl. Her attempt to shoulder the actions of a foolish younger sister for a time puts her in a very bad light with her friends and her sweetheart, but all difficulties are finally cleared away leaving Patricia in the arms of her Dan. The remarkable second act dressing room scene is still the sensation of the piece as it reveals the chorus dressing-room of a New York theater with a score or more of girls preparing for the evening performance. Manager Henry B. Harris has retained most of the original cast with the play, including Alice Leigh, Izabella Goodwin, Winona Willett, Lotta Brunnell, Annie Ives, Helen Dahl, Florence Grant, Loy Arnold, Claire Lane, Wilfred Lucas, Giles Shine, Robert Stowa Gill, Thos. Maguire, George McNamara, Francis Check, Edgar Birch and S. G. Grant.

BLESSINGS OF A GOOD WIFE.

Wifely devotion was well illustrated in the case of two prisoners recently released from the Ohio penitentiary. At the gates, waiting to receive them, were their wives. The husband in each instance had violated the law and been condemned by a jury of his peers, but the wife had never faltered in her faith or sympathy or helpfulness. And there, welcoming the men to a new freedom and encouraging them to a new life, stood these two women, typical of the best of their sex. Many men, after the humiliation of a prison life, are hampered by suspicion and rebuffed in every effort to lead a better life and are ultimately driven by discouragement back to crime and prison. It ought not to be so with these two men, or with any of the others who, on release, find themselves still possessed of the love of a good woman.
Love that is not destroyed by a husband's mistakes, devotion that is not marred by years of imprisonment, and loyalty that stands the test of long absence are not so common that their appearance is to be ignored. To complete the picture, these men should, as we believe they will, show by their upright conduct an appreciation of the blessings that they have in their wives. —From the Columbus Dispatch.

crew depends very largely on their skill and experience, and particularly on the skill and experience of the men directing the work. It is not only a question of knowledge of how to assign each man where his work will be most effective, but there must be judgment exercised in determining the general method of attack. The character of the fire, the character of the forest, the condition of the atmosphere, the strength and direction of the wind, the rapidity with which the fire is running, and many other points have to be taken into consideration."
After describing how surface fires may be put out by beating, by throwing sand or loose dirt, and by other methods, the account goes on:
"Sometimes the front of the fire is so fierce that it is impossible to meet it directly. One method under such circumstances is to direct the course of the fire. The attack is made on the sides near the front, separating the forward portion of the fire from the main wings. A part of the crew attacks the forward part and others run down and extinguish the wings. The front of the fire, attacked from the sides, is forced gradually and constantly into a narrower path. Usually the front can be directed toward some cleared space, road, pond, stream, swamp or fire line, when it will be checked enough to admit of a direct front attack. Sometimes by this plan the front may be rapidly narrowed by working from the sides, until it is at last entirely extinguished. The plan of giving direction to the course of the fire has often been successfully carried out when the fighting crew is too small for a direct attack.
"When fires gain such headway that it is impossible to stop them by direct attack, no matter how numerous and efficient the crew or complete the equipment for fighting, back firing becomes the only means of stopping the fire. It should, however, be used only when it is absolutely necessary. One of the commonest mistakes in fighting fires is to overestimate the rapidity of the fire and the difficulty of putting it out. A forest fire is always a frightening spectacle, particularly if it is sweeping in the direction of one's own property. Men often become excited and start back fires when it is entirel unnecessary. Back firing necessarily involves deliberately burning over property. When this belongs to another person and one's own forest seems in danger, there is a great temptation to sacrifice it.
"If it is found that a back fire is necessary, a favorable point is selected directly in front of the fire, from which to set the new fire. This must be a point where it is safe to start a back fire such as a road, fire line, stream, or swamp. The leaves are ignited at points five feet to a rod apart for a distance not greater than the estimated width of the head of the fire. These small fires gradually meet and form a continuous line, eating back against the wind. A part of the crew is stationed across the road or other break from which the back fire is started and put out at once the small fires which may result from the sparks blown over from the back fire.
"The meeting of the two fires stops at once the head of the main fire. It is usually possible then to attack the wings with the ordinary methods of fighting. It is necessary to attack the wings at once, particularly if there is a strong wind; for otherwise each wing of the old fire would soon form an independent fire with a well developed head. It is necessary, also, that a number of men be stationed where the original fire and the back fire meet in order to extinguish smoldering fires in tops, logs and other debris."
"A fire is never out," the bulletin concludes, "until the last spark is extinguished. Often a log or snag will smolder unnoticed after the flames have apparently been conquered only breakout afresh with a rising wind. After the fire fighting crew has left the ground it is always well to assign at least one man to patrol the edges of the burned area until it is certain that the fire is entirely out. This may not be for several days."

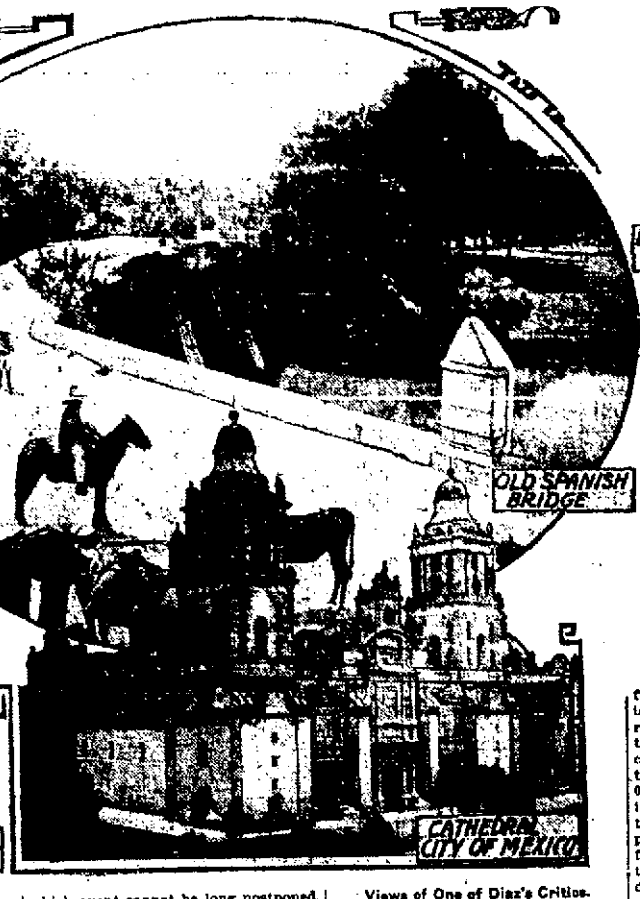
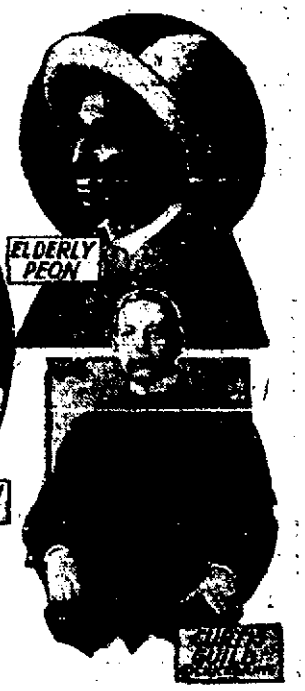
ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO MEXICO STRUCK FOR FREEDOM





By CHARLES N. LURIE.

THIRTY-FOUR years ago the nations of the world joined with us in celebrating the centennial of our national existence. This year and this month they are paying the same compliment to our southern neighbor, the republic of Mexico. Special embassies from the European and Asiatic nations attest the friendliness toward Mexico of all the world. The United States has not lagged behind in its manifestations of good will for President Taft's "great and good friend," President Porfirio Diaz, and his country. In the festivities attendant on the celebration of Mexico's centennial the American delegates are taking a prominent part under the guidance of Henry Lane Wilson, our ambassador to Mexico, who is playing the role of a special envoy for this occasion. At the head of the American delegation is Curtis Guild, Jr., former governor of Massachusetts. The other members of the delegation are General Harrison Grey Otis of Los Angeles, Alexander Rook of Pittsburg and Justice James W. Gerard of the supreme court of New York. They were appointed by President Taft.

Strictly speaking, it is not the centennial of their independence which is being celebrated by our fellow Americans. It is the centennial of the beginning of their long struggle for independence from Spain, the struggle that culminated and ended more than a decade later in actual freedom. The standard of revolt against Spanish rule was raised in 1810 by Hidalgo and his colleagues and followers, but it was not until 1821 that the virtual independence of the country was recognized by the agreement between Guerrero, the Mexican leader at the time, and O'Donaju, the Spanish viceroy. Since that time the history of Mexico records many internecine wars as well as the contests with the United States and with France, but none with the mother country.

The story of the war for Mexican independence is similar to that of the other Spanish-American countries—a narrative of intermittent bloody strife wherein the savage cruelties of the half civilized descendants of the natives play a prominent part and marked on the whole by steadily advancing gains by the patriots.

Hidalgo the "Washington of Mexico."

The foremost figure in this era of Mexican history is Miguel Hidalgo, the early leader of the revolt, who met a martyr's death at Chihuahua on July 30, 1811. He is now known as "the Washington of Mexico," and his monuments mark public squares in the cities of his country.

From all accounts Hidalgo appears to have been a public spirited patriot with no thought of personal advantage. He was curate of the village of Dolores and was implicated in the plots for Mexican independence that followed the disturbed conditions of Spain in Napoleonic times. It was on the night of Sept. 15, 1810, that Hidalgo was informed that the Spanish viceroy's government was planning his arrest and those of his fellow conspirators. Repairing to the village belfry, Hidalgo sounded the tocsin, followed by the famous "grito de Dolores," or battlecry, that has resounded through Mexican history since that day. The burden of Hidalgo's shout was "Long live religion! Long live our holy mother of Guadalupe! Long live America and death to bad government!"

For a time Hidalgo's efforts for his country met with splendid success. An army of 80,000 enthusiastic but undisciplined and ignorant patriots repaired to his standard. Guanajuato and other places were taken, but the banners of the revolutionists were stained by cruelties and excesses. It is said that fear of a repetition of such crimes induced Hidalgo to halt when the City of Mexico, the seat of government, lay open to his arms. However that may be, in a short time the tide of victory turned against him, and it seemed that his execution at Chihuahua sounded the deathknell of the revolution. But the banner fell from his grasp into other able hands, and after ten years of desperate struggle Mexico was freed.

Nations' Stake In Mexico.

The later history of Mexico is one of factional fighting and of national development in keeping with modern civilization. For many decades the tramp of armed men threatened to stamp out the torch of progress, but the peace that came in with the regime of Diaz in the seventies promises to be lasting. The recuperation of the country from the war with the United States in the forties of the past century and the successful revolt against French domination that ended Maximilian's empire in 1867 proved the innate worth of Mexico. In recent years few other countries have established so high a reputation for stability of investment, and Mexican national credit stands high among the nations.

A recent estimate of the American capital alone invested in Mexican securities, railroads, industries, etc., placed it at $500,000,000. The British, French, German and other foreign interests are great, though not equaling in all probability the amount of the American investment. Whatever may be said of the rule of Diaz—whether he is a "benevolent despot" and the regenerator of Mexico, as asserted by his friends, or a bloody oppressor of his people, as his enemies declare—there can be no doubt that his continued rule, with its security for property rights, has made for peace and safety for foreign capital in Mexico. With his gathering to his fathers, which event cannot be long postponed, for the president of Mexico was born Sept. 15, 1830, Mexico may revert to the disturbed conditions that preceded his ascendancy. But it is not likely since Mexico has in Corral, Creel, Reyes and others men able to carry on the government on the lines laid down by their able leader.

Diaz may not be the greatest man of the present time, as is asserted so frequently, but he ranks well with the greatest administrators of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and indeed of all time. Any man who can hold down the turbulent passions of the millions of Mexicans for almost forty years, as he has done, deserves a high place on the roll of able statesmen.

The righteousness of the Diaz rule is another matter. There have been opposition candidates for the presidency of Mexico since Diaz commenced his continuous administration in 1884, but memory fails to record their names. His foes declare that there has not been an honest election in Mexico in that time. Only a Mexican close to Diaz could prove or disprove that charge. But as Diaz has few personal friends and still fewer confidants the question will probably remain unanswered for all time.

Views of One of Diaz's Critics.

One recent writer commented on Diaz and his regime in the following terms:

"Did all Latin America set up republics modeled after the United States only to prove their uselessness by resigning democratic government to the strong man? Nothing of value about parliamentary discussion is noticeable in this biography (a life of Diaz). The Mexican constitution was changed in order to lengthen the presidential term of Diaz. It was easy. The constitution did not fit the man; therefore let it be fitted to him. Nothing can hide the fact that his achievement is at the price of arrested constitutionalism and undeveloped democracy."

That phrase "undeveloped democracy" arrests attention. Modern authorities upon Mexico and its institutions, governmental and otherwise, seem inclined to believe that there is no such thing as democracy in Mexico and that the country will be ruled for many years, if not forever, by the ruling class that now directs its affairs. The gulf between the descendants of the old Spanish families, pure in blood, and the peon, or laboring class, is wide and unbridgable. Harrowing tales of cruel treatment of the peon and his women folk, especially in the wilderness of Yucatan, have come recently from Mexico. Slavery, it is said, exists in fact, if not in name. The progress of the country in international esteem is gained, it is declared, at the cost of the degradation of the mass of the population of 16,000,000 or 17,000,000. There is no doubt that Mexico is prosperous and quiet, but a question mark must be placed after the prosperity of its lower classes until a fair and unprejudiced examination into the country can be made. And that day seems still far off since the ruling class of Mexico does not court too close investigation of its internal conditions. "Your investments are perfectly safe and pay good interest," say the wealthy, educated Mexicans in reply to queries. "What more do you desire?"

Mexico's Month of Celebration.

If the lower classes of Mexico demand only "bread and circuses," in the old Latin phrase, they are in a fair way to have their desires gratified during the month's celebration of the Mexican centennial that is planned. Throughout the empire there are rejoicings and preparations for the inauguration of great public works. Public improvements to cost millions of dollars have been planned in all parts of the republic. The official program for the celebration of the centennial covers more than a month of festivities and public functions. The central figure in it all is the aged president, who shows in his upright, soldierly bearing no mark of the inroads of time. The culminating moment of his long career, the night of Sept. 15, 1910, marked by his stepping out on the balcony of the national palace in the City of Mexico to receive the homage of his people, will live long in the minds of the Mexicanos.

Forest Fire Loss a Tax Paid on Carelessness and Improvidence

PROBABLY in no more impressive way may a realization of the innate improvidence of the American public be brought home to the American than by an inspection and estimate of the annual ruin wrought by forest fires. This year's record of shame in this respect will not fall below the lamentable total of other years. When it is considered that the enormous waste of property and the loss of life are avoidable in great part color is lent to the assertion of some of the less friendly of our foreign visitors that we are still a semicivilized nation. In no other country of the world is such loss incurred through the neglect of precaution. Other nations know the value of their forests and protect them. We are just beginning to awaken to a realization of our possibilities. Possibly when we are "tried by fire" even more severely in the future than in the past we shall take thought about the thorough protection of our dwindling forests from the ravages of flame.

The great forest conflagrations that have devastated the wooded regions of the northwest have called renewed attention to the matter of the protection of the forests from fire. They have lent additional timeliness to the publication by the United States forest service of a brochure on "Protection of Forests From Fire," written by Henry S. Graves, the chief forester. Mr. Graves states that "the first measure necessary for the successful practice of forestry is protection from forest fires" and goes on to relate what has been done to safeguard the trees. He then declares: "In spite of all that has been done, however, the fact remains that most of the forests of the country, particularly those privately owned, are inadequately protected from fire. It is probable that in fully 75 per cent of the private forests there is no attempt whatever at systematic protection."

What form the protection of forests from fire shall take is not a question open to doubt or discussion since various methods to fit various conditions are recognized and advocated by the authorities on forests. "In some sections of the country forest fires have always been of such common occurrence that there is a popular notion that they cannot be prevented," says Mr. Graves. "The risk from fires can never be entirely eliminated, for in the forest there is always inflammable material which is very easily ignited. They may, however, be largely prevented, and under efficient organization their damage may be kept low."

"The states of New York and Massachusetts have taken the lead in establishing effective measures to protect the forests from fire," says a recent editorial article in a New York newspaper. "They are requiring the disposal of slash by the loggers. They are trimming the felled trees, developing roads, trails and fire lines, stringing telephone lines through the forests and connecting systems of lookout stations. They are looking out for sparks from locomotives and from sawmills, enforcing stringent rules about the lighting and abandonment of campfires, instructing careless smokers and checking the effects of incendiarism and lightning." This summarizes well the precautions needed to prevent loss in the past and save for the country the large part of its dwindling tree supply that is lost each year in the flames.

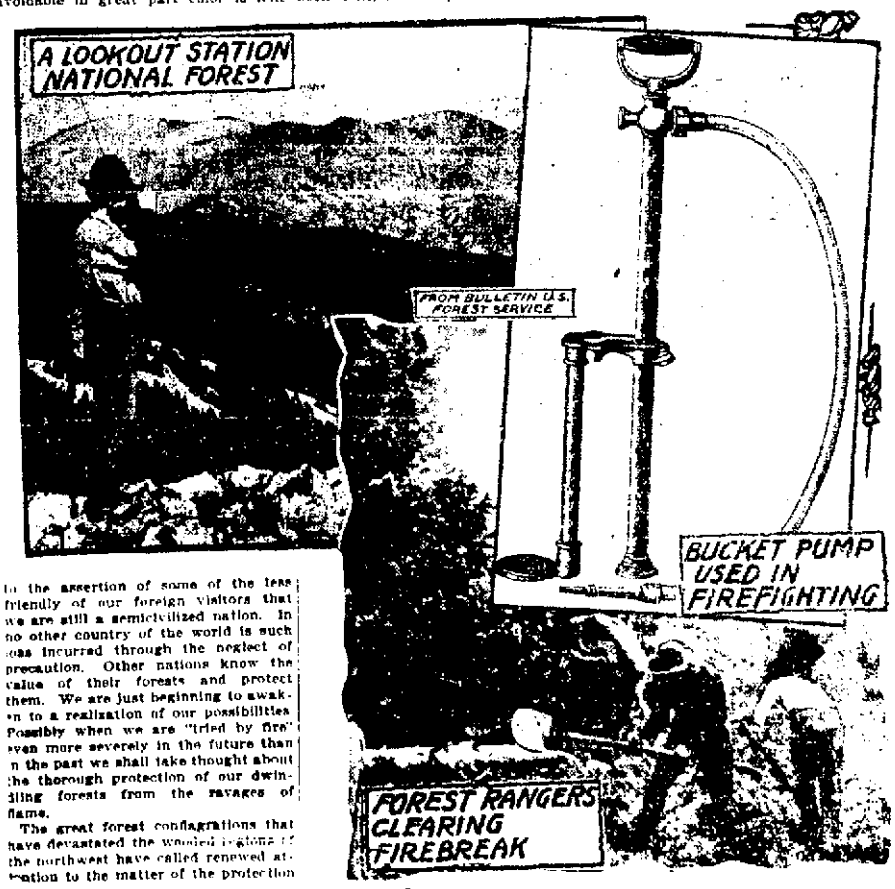
An idea of the magnitude of the forest fire loss in the United States may be gained from the figures for 1908. It should be stated, however, that that year the loss was unusually severe. The estimated loss was more than $50,000,000. Between Sept. 15 and 30, 1908, the losses were more than $1,000,000 a day. Besides the destruction in the west and northwest, serious fire losses were also reported in New York and Pennsylvania.

It is certain that in the national forests, where the precautions referred to above are taken, the fire loss is much lower than in forests privately owned. In 1907 the timber destroyed in the forest reserves was valued at only $31,590. In that year more than 1,100 fires were extinguished in the national forests at a total cost of only $9,000.

For a long series of years figures have been collated showing the loss of life due to forest fires, and it is established that the average number of deaths annually is sixty-five.

The illustration shows an employee of the forestry service on the lookout for forest fires. Complaint is made by the chief forester that too much work is asked of his men. In some cases one man is called upon to assume the responsibility and undertake the arduous task of watching 100,000 acres of forest. Comparison with the forest services of other countries shows the injustice of this requirement. Mr. Graves asks for one guard for every 10,000 acres and declares that Prussia, which leads the world in forest protection and conservation, has one guard for every 1,000 acres.

ARTHUR J. BRINTON.



Alfonso of Spain, Royal Sportsman

IF Nero fiddled while Rome burned, according to ancient and somewhat discredited tradition, why may not King Alfonso of Spain try on women's hats at Cowes while his country is in the throes of a serious conflict between church and state? Carping critics with a memory for historical facts may recall the untimely end of Rome's unlamented emperor, but they have no warrant for believing that Spain will turn on Alfonso as Rome did on Nero. In one respect, however, the analogy holds good with striking force. It was Galba, a man from Spain, who brought about Nero's downfall.

History records the fact that Nero was deficient in physical courage, and that may not be said with truth about Alfonso. In sheer daring and disregard of danger he ranks highest among European monarchs. In other respects a comparison between Nero and Alfonso is unfair to the young Spanish king. He has none of the cruelty and unconcern for the rights of others that marked "the worst of the Caesars." He is a true sportsman in every sense of the word, and a sportsman worthy of the name cannot fail in consideration for others. His sportsmanship and contempt of personal peril were illustrated strikingly recently in England when Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, on which King Alfonso was a guest, met with a mishap. The press dispatches [illegible] no other man on board the vessel was cooler than the young king.

Yachting [illegible] Alfonso [illegible] alone a theory [illegible] took the [illegible] hazards for [illegible] the thick of a race [illegible] ing over the [illegible] hesitate to lend a hand [illegible] sheet or tiller. Whatever [illegible] so happens to be, on land or shore, he wants to be in the thick of things. He has a constitutional dislike to standing back and letting [illegible] the fun. He [illegible] tator does not [illegible] is "something [illegible] of a long line of kings, with numerous servants to do his will. Doing things for [illegible] is [illegible]

The [illegible] King [illegible] sport [illegible] worth more than $10,000, all won by himself in various lines of sport. Those who had followed the career of the king were not astonished. They knew that he had been collecting trophies by means of uncommon skill in sailing, shooting, motoring, riding and other modes of sport, aided, of course, by the command of unlimited amounts of money. While Spain, generally speaking, is a poor country, it is not niggardly to its sovereign, and he has, besides, the command of large private sources of income. With them he can indulge his bent in [illegible] sports to his heart's content. [illegible] is king, "the sport of [illegible]" does not appeal to him as much as does sailing, although he [illegible] yacht chiefly for [illegible] convenient travel [illegible]

Like another king of old, he had tried all the possibilities of the earth in the line of fun, and he wanted "new worlds to conquer." He mentioned his desires to his queen, Victoria. Theretofore that lady had been very complaisant with her spouse and had entered no objection to his risking his royal neck in a racing automobile or by collision with a swinging boom. But right there was where Victoria put down her royal British foot. She may not have used the words "nothing doing" to Alfonso, but that was the purport of her remarks. Before Alfonso left Spain for the trip to France that included an inspection of the Wright machine he promised Victoria that he would not take a flight. So when Wilbur Wright asked him to try to ascend higher than any king had ever gone in the air Alfonso was true to his royal word and declined. He compromised by sitting with the American at the levers and having the workings of the machine explained to him. An interesting picture taken at the time shows him drinking in the words of the aviator and making with his hands motions like a bird's wing. Although Ferdinand of Bulgaria has beaten him to the honor of going in an aeroplane it may not be long before Alfonso tries a flight—that is, if Victoria gives back his promise; otherwise not. She is said to be a large person with an extremely active will of her own.

Three Greatest Pitchers In Baseball Today

By TOMMY CLARK.

THE baseball pitcher is the most important cog in the diamond machine, considering him from any angle you like. A cracking good twirler is worth his weight in gold to any major league team. Without one or two really good twirlers no big league club has ever won a pennant. Scouts who are on the lookout for new talent say that pitchers who give promise of developing into crackerjacks are as scarce as hens' teeth. Clubs that have star slabbists are not willing to part with buxmen for any amount of money.

Take, for instance, Christy Mathewson of the New York Nationals. How much would it take to buy Christy from the Giants? What is the market quotation of "Three Fingered" Brown of the Cubs? What does the Washington Americans want for Walter Johnson? Then, turning to veteran material, what would the Cleveland Naps want for the great, grand old man of the game, Cy Young? Nearly every team in the big league has a star pitcher. Of these a few stand out like the Singer building in New York. After going through the lot one finds three pitchers more famous than all the rest, and they are Christy Mathewson, Cy Young and Walter Johnson. The three named are more discussed than any others that can be named. Mathewson is the greatest pitcher in the game today, Cy Young is the most famous that ever did box duty, and Walter Johnson is the greatest slabbist that has been discovered in recent years. Just glance over a brief review of the careers of the three men.

Christy Mathewson.

Christy Mathewson is indeed a remarkable athlete. He had the luck to fill when he drew to physique and brains. There are a number of pitchers in the major leagues who haven't the speed and the curves they used to have, but they retain their control of the ball, and they have as a stock in trade an intimate knowledge of the weakness of every hitter who faces them. They "get away with it" because they mix brains with their limited ability and win over younger men who have speed and curves to burn.

Every once in awhile there comes a pitcher who has everything—speed, curves, control and knowledge of his opponents. Mathewson is such a pitcher. He has great physical strength, a fine assortment of curves and with all this knowledge of the weak spots of hitters, which enables him to feed a man the very thing which he cannot use.

Mathewson has been recognized as one of the greatest twirlers the game ever produced for a long time. He was a great pitcher before the illness which came near putting him out of baseball for good. While he was recuperating from that illness he experimented with a new series of curves which might be delivered with as slight a tax on his strength as possible.

He discovered the "fadeaway," and he is the only man in the world who can make use of this peculiar drop. It is now his trademark.

Lots of fellows know how he throws it. They know how to go through the motions, but when it comes to whipping the tips of their fingers over the cover of the ball in order to make it float up and fall dead in front of the plate they have to pass out. The "fadeaway" belongs to Mathewson.

Mathewson's great specialty is finding out what the new leaguers do not like. He has a memory like a filing cabinet. By the time he has watched a new man work through a game against a right hander Matty comes pretty nearly having the case diagnosed, and he knows what the new man likes and, what is more important, what he does not like.

In eight years of the ten he has served with the Giants Matty lost more than half his games in only two seasons. He pitched six games in 1900 and lost all of them. In 1902, when the Giants were thoroughly demoralized, he lost a few more games than he won. Since then his winning percentage has been high.

Matty has pitched over 375 games for the Giants since he broke into the league in 1900. In those days the Giants were consistent tail enders, and even though Matty became a pitching sensation soon after he began to take his regular turn he did not earn the pitching crown until after McGraw took charge of the team and made it a winner.

Cy Young.

Cy Young, baseball's grand old man, has established a record that will probably never be equaled. Columns, in fact, might be written about the wonderful achievements of the only man that ever won over 500 big league games—the only man who was ever able to stick in the big league for twenty-one years as a pitcher and pitch good ball during that period.

Twenty-one years! 'Tis a long time to serve in any one line—particularly as a big league pitcher.

It is doubtful if the game will see a man who can preserve his arm and retain his cunning for that time. To do what Young has done a pitcher must have everything break right for him. One cannot say that luck has been the great big factor in Young's success, but unless he had been with winning teams during the greater part of his career many of his well pitched games would have gone the other way.

Long after the allotted life of a baseball player, Young today is still one of the strongest pitchers in the country. Neither sentiment nor charity has kept him in the game this long. He is drawing a fortnightly check from a big league club on sheer merit alone. Young owes his baseball longevity to careful living. He has a farm in Ohio and stays there throughout the off season.

Walter Johnson.

Now, take Walter Johnson of the Washington Americans. This youngster is one of the greatest twirlers that ever handled a ball. He is one of the few players who broke into baseball without any minor league training and made good from the start. Many ball tossers in the American league say that Johnson is the greatest pitcher in the country today. The records will never show Johnson's superiority to "Big Six," because Mathewson has a fairly good team back of him, while Johnson is supported by a weak one.

If Johnson could pitch for a team like the Athletics, good fielders and good hitters, it would be hard for him to lose more than three games a year. His speed is so terrific that no Washington catcher but Street can hold him. His smoke ball has knocked out Beckendorf and Henry, young receivers.

There does not seem to be any question that Walter Johnson possesses more speed than any pitcher the game has ever developed. There have been those who believed that Amos Rusie, the famous New York pitcher of a few years ago, had more speed than Johnson, but the fact that no catcher found it difficult to handle Rusie's delivery, while Johnson is putting his catchers out of the game with bruised hands, would indicate that the Idaho wonder has more on his ball than did Rusie.

Dick Buckley caught Rusie in a large majority of his games, and he never found his hands giving out as a result, as have Street, Beckendorf and Henry in catching Johnson. It is pretty hard lines on a pitcher when he is forced to let up for the want of a catcher to hold him.

WOLGAST NOT BUSY FOR CHAMPION FIGHTER.

Plenty of Lightweights Are Willing to Tackle Him, but He Pays No Heed to Them.

The shutting down of the long route fights in California has put a kink into the champion events of all classes. Unless the promoters in the Golden State get started again and hold twenty round battles it will be necessary to shift the champion bouts to other shores. Australia and England afford a haven, but both countries are quite a distance away, and American fighters, who hold most of the titles, would prefer to fight at home if possible. For a champion, Ad Wolgast has not been very busy since he won his title from Battling Nelson. Ad has lots of notchers. The one match which the fans would like to see would be between Wolgast and Freddy Welsh, the champion of Great Britain, or with Packy McFarland. The weight question keeps the Chicago boy out of a match, but there is nothing in that line to prevent a meeting with Welsh, as the latter can make the weight easily—that is, 133 pounds ringside.

Another good match would be Owen Moran and Wolgast, but it seems a hard matter to get them together in a twenty round bout. Wolgast says he has promised Battling Nelson first crack at the title, but there appears to be little likelihood of their meeting before next New Year's or later, and then they may not be able to agree on terms, as Nelson will not stand for the terms proposed by Tom Jones, manager of Wolgast. New Orleans can hold bouts of twenty rounds and may land some of them, but the promoters in the Crescent City do not care about going too strong for fear of spoiling the game.

NOT MANY STRIKEOUTS.

Greatest Pitchers Are Not Masters at Fanning Men.

The greater the pitcher the fewer men he strikes out is usually the rule. The ordinary run of fans go out to a game when Mullin or Joss or Walsh is pitching and are disappointed if the twirler does not whiff a dozen or more. There is a reason.

Pitchers who know their business try to save their salary arms as much as possible. To strike out a batter means the delivery of five to eight balls on an average. The pitcher may start with a ball and then a strike. Then another ball may follow, two or three fouls, another ball and then possibly the third strike. This requires lots of work and exertion on the muscles. The twirler who understands the game generally tries to get the batter to hit to his fielders.

Take a man like Mullin. He is happy if he has to pitch only three balls during an inning. Three grounders to the infield in rapid succession save his arm more than the man sitting in the bleachers would believe. A game with comparatively little exertion leaves the pitcher in better condition for the next time he has to work. That is why you hear the infielders yell out, "Make him hit it, George!" They also seek to make things as easy as possible for the hurler.

Not long ago Addie Joss of Cleveland pitched a no hit game against the Sox. He struck out few batters. His knack that day lay in making the Sox ground out. His control was so perfect that many of them pushed a dinky roller straight at him. The only time when the pitcher really and truly tries to fan the batter is when he is in a tight hole. With two out and the bases full he works his hardest to outguess the batter and make him retire on strikes.

Confidence in the team behind him has a lot to do with the way the great twirler goes. That is why the high salaried men on the leading teams of the country fan fewer than the pitchers of the weaker teams. For instance, McIntire does not fan half as many batters since joining the Cubs as he did when with Brooklyn. It forms a psychological study of rare interest.

Langford's Chances For Fight With Johnson Slim.

Sam Langford's chances for a fight with Jack Johnson for the heavyweight championship of the world are mighty slim. "Li'l Artha" does not seem to want any of Langford's game—first, because, he said, two negroes would not draw enough of a crowd to warrant the match, and, second, because Johnson figures Langford is not in the championship class. Sam has not made enough of a name for himself to make him eligible for championship honors, said Johnson.

"He's still in the infant class in the pugilistic world," declared the negro champion.

"I've been up against all of 'em," said "Li'l Artha." "The only man who aises up at all is Kaufman. He's a clever boy, and with two or three years' proper trainin' he will undoubtedly be in shape to fight me. At that time I shall be too old for a good battle, and I am not sure I would not go off the stage by the Jeffries route."

"Well, what about Langford?" the champion was asked.

"Quit yer kiddin'," said the big negro. "I've already cleaned him up, and he does not size up well.

"Another thing, there ain't no use of two black men gettin' together for a championship fight in these parts. There's no money in it. Just look, for instance, at the fight between Joe Gans and Joe Walcott, two of the best men of their day. The bout drew a house of about $4,000. Can you imagine me goin' up against a fighter for any such sum as that? Why, I'm clearin' up $50,000 this season doin' a vaudeville stunt.

"Besides, Langford does not seem to want to fight. He's all the time talkin' about this offer and that, but you don't see any of his coin goin' up, do you? I didn' four flush with Jeffries. I put my coin up, and that settled it."

Pleasures and Dangers of Canoeing

A PAGE DEVOTED TO WOMAN'S BEST INTERESTS

TAILORED SUIT OF CHEVRON SERGE.

Clothes for the College Girl

SHOPPING and dressmaking for the college girl has been going merrily on for the past few weeks. And most important of all the costumes of this outfit are the tailored suits, two of which are absolutely necessary to the well being of any girl's school life. The knockabout costume is perhaps the most important. It should be of good, serviceable material and of a color that will not fade or become streaked and dingy looking. This season, when tweed effects are considered such good style, a suit of this material in gray or brown minglings is to be recommended.

The natty little costume seen in the illustration, however, is of dark navy blue chevron serge with invisible hair lines of black. The skirt is built along the hobble lines sans the exaggerated hobble. A flounce and panel effect all in one makes a smart setting for the circular sides, which, where they join the flounce, are laid in tiny stitched tucks. There is nothing remarkably new about the coat except the "finger" length that is novel this fall. The perfect tailoring of the suit is its chief charm. Altogether it is a sensible, smart and becoming suit for most college girls.

The college girl in her hat copies her Harvard brothers to a nicety, and where his usually turns down over the eyes hers flaunts its brim to the utmost rolled back limit.

There isn't a wing to shock the sensibilities of an Audubonite or to be the despair of the student who flings her chapeaus to the four corners of her "den" when she comes in to do some special "grind" or is celebrating some victory of the basketball team. No, there is nothing to mar the plainness of this soft, silky mouse gray beaver hat save a band and cabochon of fancy silk. The hat itself, by the way, is of the mouse shade of brown.

For church and best wear costume there is a wider field of choice. Fancy may run riot and dainty colorings may be chosen, although Dame Fashion now decrees that our winter frocks should be in dark colorings. Velvet and velveteen are apt to play a conspicuous part in the wardrobe. Certainly velvet will in the millinery world be even more used than ever.

A soft pretty shade of rather dark green velveteen for the dressy suit, with moderate sized flowerpot hat to match trimmed with satin of a lighter shade shirred under the brim and appearing in a smart rosette on the outside, with the tall crown and brim massed with grayish and old rose roses—how does that strike you for a Sunday-go-to-meeting frock and hat?

Wholesome, Healthy Housekeeping

No matter how many servants there may be in the household, if things are to run smoothly there must be some recognized head to the establishment, be it the mistress herself or a hired housekeeper. Imagine a man attempting to run a business of which he knew nothing. Yet that is what women are doing every day in the home.

It behooves every woman who has a home of her own to know enough of household arts to see at least that she is not being cheated or the health of her family endangered.

It is not enough to give orders. See that they are carried out.

If only in the matter of health it is "up to" the housekeeper to look sharply to her affairs. This season of the year is a slack time in service, and refrigerators, garbage pails, cellar and food are apt to be neglected unless it be clearly understood that the mistress of the home is likely to pounce down with her eagle eye at a minute's notice. The woman who sets a high standard usually achieves it. Garbage pails can ruin one's reputation as a cleanly citizen, besides being a menace to the family's health and comfort from flies and mosquitoes. The garbage pail should be kept covered and disinfectants sprinkled inside and out.

A cellar can become very moldy in a week in warm weather, especially if baskets are allowed to stand around with fruit and decaying vegetables in them. Visit the underground part of your house every few days and at the first sign of mustiness sprinkle lime about and wash off the shelves with a solution of carbolic acid. Insist upon careful preparation of foods. Meat and fish not fresh can cause serious sickness, while stale vegetables and fruit are almost as bad. See that not more perishable food is being bought than you can use within two days; also give strict instructions that "suspicion" is to be read "spoiled" in connection with foods.

Besides watching for freshness, insist upon careful preparation of dried fruits, green vegetables and mushrooms. All garden products should be carefully washed in a colander and dried on a clean towel before using. Speckled fruit should be discarded or freely cut away beyond the danger line. Spinach, lettuce, etc., should be picked over carefully as well as thoroughly washed.

At first a housekeeper of the careful, watchful type will be called cranky, but she can soon be reasonably sure that she is living under sanitary conditions and that health is not suffering from slack housekeeping.

SUNDAY DINNER DESSERTS

WHAT to have for dessert for Sunday dinner is apt to annoy the housekeeper on Saturday morning when she is making out the Sunday menus. A particularly pleasing dessert is called Spanish cream. It is made in the following way: Put one quart of milk in a double boiler. Stir into it one-half box of gelatin which has been soaked in a little water. Beat three eggs yolks and one cupful of sugar together and stir into the milk to the boiling point. Remove from the fire and stir in the beaten whites of the three eggs. Beat all together until cool, add flavor to taste and pour into mold. This dessert should be made the day before using. Serve with plain rich or whipped cream.

GLAZED GINGER APPLES.

Core and pare eight apples. Make a sirup with a cupful of sugar and a cupful of water. Cook the apples in the sirup, putting them in as fast as they are ready, cooking them until tender. Turn the apples during cooking and do not cover the dish, as the steam would cause them to break into pieces. Have ready rounds of stale sponge cake. When the apples are cooked place them on the cake, generously sprinkled with granulated sugar from the dredger, and set them in the oven to glaze. In the meanwhile add half a cupful of finely chopped crystallized ginger to the apple sirup and fill the open spaces with pieces of the ginger. Serve hot with cream.

QUEEN OF PUDDINGS.

This is another tasty dessert, as royal a dish as its name implies. Soak two cups of baker's breadcrumbs without crusts in two cupfuls of milk. Add one-half cupful of sugar beaten with yolks of two eggs, grated rind of one-half lemon and small pieces of butter. Bake until firm; then spread some kind of tart jelly over pudding and cover this with the whites of two eggs beaten with one-quarter cupful of sugar. Place in the oven until the meringue rises and is a nice brown. It is delicious with cold thin cream.

PRUNE DUMPLINGS.

For persons who like substantial deserts this recipe is to be recommended: Stone and chop one pound of fine prunes and mix them with one cupful of finely chopped suet, one cupful of breadcrumbs, one cupful of flour, one cupful of sugar and three-fourths of a teaspoonful of baking soda, mixing it with buttermilk till a soft batter. Pour into well greased basin or mold, cover with buttered paper and steam three hours. Turn out and serve with sweet sauce.

FOR pink frocks which so readily fade there is a way to make a "pinking water" instead of bluing water, which most laundresses use for everything, regardless of color. Take a small piece of turkey red cheesecloth, pour boiling water over it and let it soak until the desired tint is the result. Put the "pink" water into a bucket of cold water and in this soak the dress that is to be "pinked" for about an hour after it has been washed. Wring lightly, for too hard screwing would make the color uneven, and then hang out to dry. If the laundress is afraid to try this on a best dress let her experiment with something of little value until she becomes expert.

It is said that an experienced laundress never sprinkles her table linen. She dries it thoroughly in the air, then dips it into boiling water and puts it through the wringer. Each article is then folded in a dry cloth as smoothly as possible and allowed to remain there for a couple of hours or so. Irons must be hot, but not scorching, because the linen must be ironed perfectly dry. Herein lies the secret of table linen that is guiltless of starch.

* *

A portable wardrobe for a little room without a closet has just been made at small expense. The carpenter built a frame six feet high, three and a half feet wide and a foot and a half deep. Across the ends he put bars, and from these, across the long way of the frame, he fitted small poles for clothes hangers. Then the girl herself who conjured up the idea painted the framework to match the woodwork of the room and covered the ends and back with cretonne, put on flat with brass headed tacks at top and bottom. The front she fitted with a brass rod and hung with a curtain of cretonne. The bottom of the curtain was supplied with weights to keep it from blowing out with chance breezes.

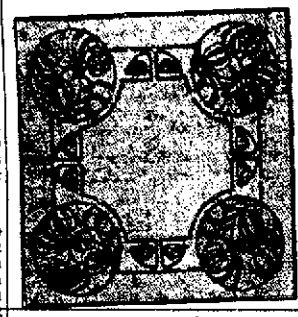
In taking lace curtains from the stretchers don't pull them off, but lift off from each nail carefully and when pressing dampen the edges first, then press, and you will find that they will not ruffle, but hang perfectly straight and smooth as when new.

* *

Handkerchiefs always yellow badly in "perspiry" weather. Javelle water, put up by the druggists, is the safest and surest whitener for them. But the bath should not be too strong, and the handkerchiefs should be thoroughly rinsed after they come from it. It is more the lack of proper rinsing than of bleachers that weakens the texture of fabrics in laundering.

What Is New In Needlework

IT is seldom that one sees the morning-glory flower used as a design for needlework. This blossom deserves more notice, for it is charming when gracefully designed and carefully worked.



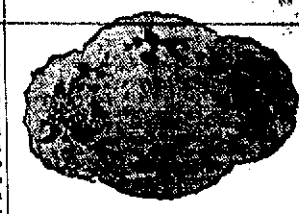
THE ST. MALO CUSHION COVER.

The centerpiece illustrated has the morning glory for a motif in its design. The flowers are gracefully arranged on a linen background and stenciled in their natural colors, so all there is to do is to outline them and fill in the veins of the leaves, and so on, which means very little labor to the embroideress, and a very effective centerpiece is the result—something out of the ordinary.

The flowers are bordered in outline stitch in several shades of purple and pinks, and with the dark green leaves the coloring shows up beautifully. Inside the cup of the flower are a few stitches of yellow and green silk. The outlining of the leaves must be perfectly done, otherwise the effect is wabbly and slovenly.

The groundwork of the St. Malo cushion cover is gray linen, and the colorings used are pinks, greens and browns. Sepia brown is used for the circles in each corner and continued along the stems, which are worked in satin stitch, and the leaves, thickly padded, are also in satin stitch in several shades of soft green. Each petal is padded and worked in a rich shade of crimson. Green is chosen for the band that outlines the border, and the small dots which break this line are in raised satin stitch in a pale shade of gobelin blue.

The finished effect of the cushion is artistic and well worth the time expended on it. Tans, browns and greens are other good color schemes, and for a drawing room the design could be carried out in turquoise blue with purple and an occasional touch of green.



MORNING GLORY CENTERPIECE.

Gifts to Bridesmaids

As it is customary to present each attendant at a wedding with a suitable gift at the bridesmaid's luncheon or the rehearsal supper many fall brides are now wondering what form these gifts should take. The object of every up to date bride is to have these souvenirs of the happy occasion as unique and individual as possible. Jewelry is usually the first choice. There are to be had exquisite bits of French jewelry, enamel or baroque pearls at moderate prices.

A charming gift is a spray of orange blossoms carried out in seed pearls. Shirt waist rings are inexpensive and novel. These may be modeled with the sign of the zodiac under which the bride was born, if all are alike, or with each bridesmaid's particular birth sign.

It is now quite smart to give a pair of gold or enameled hatpins with intertwined initials of bride and bridegroom and the date of the wedding.

A recent bride delighted her entire wedding party by presents of oblong shoe buckles studded with rhinestones.

Another prospective bride is having designed belt pins of a size to be worn at waist or back of neck. They are to be in small topaz, her birthstone, and her own and her fiance's initials are set in a circle of gold on which are to be engraved the day, month and year of the wedding.

Small charms for watch or chatelaine in bridal emblems are attractive. A tiny garter in deep yellow gold or a wedding bell with initials of bride and bridegroom engraved upon it is appropriate.

Gold or silver cardcases are popular gifts this fall for brides who can afford them. Sometimes the groom gives his ushers cigarette cases to match.

How to Be Graceful

There is no question about it, gracefulness can certainly be cultivated. Although nature has favored some women with better material to work upon than she has others, it is still possible for the girl with the most ordinary figure and carriage to possess "grace" to an agreeable extent.

First, of course, you must know what a graceful carriage means before you can train yourself to obtain one.

Your body should be almost erect. Let it incline just slightly forward above the hips. The weight of the body should rest firmly upon the balls of the feet, not on the heels or the toes.

When you are standing keep your heels fairly close together and your knees also, and let your arms hang naturally, with your elbows close to your sides.

Your shoulders must be held well back and your chin well up. The position of the chin is one of the most important of all.

If your shoulders are not naturally flat you must wear shoulder braces and also exercise them night and morning. A simple exercise is to draw the arms back behind you, bend them at the elbows and back, then walk up and down your room for ten minutes or as much longer as you can, the longer the better.

You should practice the different postures of sitting and standing before your mirror until you get the right ones. It is wonderful how this helps. Remember when you are walking that the same rule applies about balancing the weight of the body on the balls of the feet. Turn your toes slightly outward and never swing your arms.

SUFFRAGE STATIONERY.

The latest conceit in stationery is "suffragette note paper," which is as startling in its appearance as it sounds. In fact, it is quite a revolution in note paper. While members of suffrage clubs have been for some time writing official communications on paper with various emblems or mottoes expressive of their views on political equality, in their social notes they have had to forego such an opportunity to advertise their cause. Now they may write their tenderest thoughts on fine paper proclaiming as far as the eye can see that the sender is an ardent suffragist. Even the envelopes bear the mark.

The new paper is in the true suffrage color, a deep, clear yellow. At the top of the sheet and on the flap of the envelope there are tiny pairs of scales, perfectly even, with the word "Equality" underneath. Relieving the yellow is a very narrow border of brown, while the paper is tied with brown ribbon.

A TOAST TO WOMAN.

"Here's to the woman who has a smile for every joy, a tear for every sorrow, a consolation for every grief, an excuse for every fault, a prayer for every misfortune, an encouragement for every hope."—Sainte Foix.

Isn't that the kind of toast you want the man who loves you to be able to make to you, my girlie?

And isn't that the kind of toast you ought to be able to make to the girl you are going to marry, young man? Can he? Can you?

FLOWER FRIEZES.

A pretty English idea lately come to America is the application of a frieze consisting of a canvas or paper border of flowers with the background cut away with a sharp pair of scissors. The dado or ceiling border thus formed is very effective and may be applied to any room in the house with a different choice of flowers and a different tinted wall appropriately distributed for each.

USING UP OLD RIBBONS.

Have you a lot of bows, sashes and hat trimmings that are too faded and shabby for further use? Rip out all the stitches, clean off all the spots, press all wrinkles and then put them into a dye pot with silk dye.

If you select ribbon of nearly the same color and quality to go into the pot at one time you should have enough good looking ribbon to make nice plaited frills for the winter petticoat.

These dyed ribbons can also be used as color linings, facings or in making a patchwork quilt. For such permanent work, however, it is better not to dye, as it sometimes rots the ribbon. Wash ribbon carefully and use the best bits.

For the Coffee Lover.

Here is a coffeepot that will add attractiveness to any breakfast table and will also prove a boon to the mistress of the house whose husband is "mighty particular about his coffee."

The features, according to the Hardware Magazine, comprise the following good points: The steam generated from the alcohol lamp forces the water continually through the central tube. By means of the spray head it is sprayed all over the coffee on the strainer and then percolates into the reservoir, making an automatic circulation until the entire strength of the coffee is extracted.

THE LATEST APPROVED PERCOLATOR.

The globe holder clamps to the body of the percolator, the globe fits into the holder, and the cover screws down over the top of the globe, uniting all parts of the machine. This screw top makes it possible to lift the cover, globe and globe holder out of the machine with one movement. This feature admits of the percolator being tilted at any angle and still remaining intact. Ebonized handles make removing the top possible without danger of burning the hands.

Her Clothes Never Look Worn Out.

"Wear everything out, but never let anything look worn out," is the motto of one woman whose smart dressing is the envy of her friends. And she lives up to the motto on a remarkably small income simply by mixing a little forethought with her shopping.

In the autumn, when a woman's fancy gently turns to thoughts of bargains, this woman hies her forth. She takes a week to it, with prayer and not fasting, but good nourishing luncheons. When she buys a gown which she thinks will be possible for another season—and most of her gowns are chosen with a view to this contingency—she immediately matches it and puts the unused quantity away until the time for remodeling comes.

"I learned this lesson," she told a friend who met her while hard at work matching things, "when it dawned upon me through hard experience that you can seldom match last year's shades. Days of hunting would only elicit the same answer, 'This color is not in stock this season.' Then I hit on my present plan. Twice a year, spring and fall, I engage a clever seamstress I've found, and together we go over my last season's gowns. This one I have on now you would hardly realize to be a made over gown, would you? And yet it is, and the remodeling cost me a ridiculously small sum."

WAY OF EARNING A LIVING.

A countrywoman whose success in canning fruits and making jellies and pickles is famous in her part of the world has recently started in to make her own living by this same gift, the idea having been given her by a country boarder. She goes to various houses and makes the preserves and jellies at each place, staying by the week or as many days as desired and charging her railroad fare and for her work by the day. In this way she has had a very pleasant summer, for her reputation is widespread and she poses as a traveled person when back in her native village. She has also the secret of a number of wines and cordials and reaps a small harvest from this source alone.

A WILL AND A WAY.

The following episode of the Grand Prix, the fashionable race meet of Paris, was characteristic of the modes of 1910. Two elegant mannequins stepped out from one of the famous dressmaking establishments of Paris to go to the races. They were, needless to say, dressed in the height of fashion—tight (oh, how tight!) skirts and hats adorned with feathers to match. A taxicab was standing before the door. The first damsel endeavored to get in, but it was impossible. Her hat was too large for the door. However, after some skillful maneuvering she succeeded in steering it through, but when she came to take her seat another difficulty arose. The hat was too high to be accommodated under the roof of the taxi. What was to be done? The whole effect of her toilet would be ruined were she to take her hat off. An instant of hesitation; then heroically she decided and seated herself on the floor of the cab. Her companion followed suit, and thus they arrived at Longchamps. Needless to say, the scene was a source of keen delight to the curious and interested spectators.

A WORD TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

A housewife who makes her own table linen and towels has hit on a trick to lessen the labor. She adjusts a small hemmer and a fine needle on her sewing machine, removes the thread from the upright and runs the napkin or whatever it is previously cut by the drawn threads, through the hemmer. This simple method of turning the hem and pricking the stitch holes makes the handiwork very easy. Running the cloth through the machine, too, takes out the stiffness.

CAN YOU MAKE GOOD PASTRY?

To be good and tender the crust of a pie must be light, flaky and tender. The ingredients are simple—flour, shortening, cold water, a seasoning of salt and sometimes of sugar. Lard makes a tender paste, but butter gives a better flavor. The proportions usually are three or four times as much flour as shortening, according to the degree of richness desired. Pastry flour is better for this purpose than bread flour. The butter should be of a good quality and cold.

Pies made of a plain paste require from thirty-five to forty-five minutes for cooking and should be baked in a moderate oven.

Upper crusts should always be perforated to permit the steam to escape. When two pieces of pastry are put together, as in building up a rim or in putting on a top crust, the under edge should be moistened with cold water, the upper placed in position and the two edges pressed gently together.

Pie tins need no greasing. Perforated pie tins are best, as the lower crust bakes better in them than in ordinary pans.

The Schoolgirl's Allowance

Just now, when many girls are entering on their boarding school or college courses, the question of an allowance is apt to be a ruling one in the minds of her parents and in that of the young lady herself. If it is too large it will possibly give her spendthrift habits and make her the prey of undesirable and spunging schoolmates. If, on the other hand, the allowance is too small it causes embarrassment, often inducing borrowing from and cringing to girls who are willing to spend their allowances on friends.

In many schools the allowance is limited, a girl being allowed to spend only a stated sum each week. Much depends upon the school. If a girl attends a school near a large city and the rule is to take the pupils in to concerts, the theater and to lectures the allowance must necessarily be larger than at country schools.

What every girl realizes and what most parents fail to understand is that there are numbers of demands that it embarrasses a girl not to be able to meet.

An allowance should be given regularly and the sum fixed absolutely. This teaches habits of economy. It is much better to let your sons or daughters control their money, however small the amounts, than to encourage them to run up bills or spend freely with a confidence that they can get what they want from home.

THE KNEELING PROPOSAL.

Fashion's latest mandate is that the custom which was in vogue almost a century ago, when a young man knelt to propose, must be observed again, and he will also have to kiss lightly the hands of women he meets when he enters a drawing room. This style of courtesy, which was practiced in the early Victorian period, is said to be meeting with the approval of leaders of society. In London the practice is in full swing, and the critics of good manners are becoming enthusiastic about the revival. A woman prominent in society, speaking of the custom, remarked she was surprised recently when a young man on meeting her kissed her hand gracefully. "He did it in an unobtrusive way," said she, "and as nicely as if he had been a gallant of a century ago." The proposal on the knees is also revived, and it is said to be the proper thing.

THE MAN'S THE MAN.

"The man's the man," my Barney says—
An' Barney's newly married—
"Man's the wan that knows the ways
The burden should be carried,
Let the woman wear the grace
An' pleasin' pranks o' beauty
Yet be mindful of her place
An' of her wifely duty.
By the crown within my hat,
The chief of all our riches,
I'll be king o' this an' that,
An' sure I'll wear the breeches.
Yes, an' need be I can teach
The 'Spanish way' o' walkin'.
There's my Barney's manful speech—
I listen to him talkin'.

"The man's the man," my Barney says,
An', faith, my thoughts are carried
Back to well-remembered days
When I was newly married,
An' there's wan that's lookin' down
Upon the house this minute
Knows who was it wore the crown
The whiles herself was in it.
Doll I was, but plain as day
'Tis now I'm seein' through it
How she let me have her way,
An' sure I never knew it.
Puffed wid pride as I could be
An' struttin' 'round an' squawkin',
"Man's the man," sez I, an' she—
She listened to me talkin'.

MORNING GLORIES.

In sunbonnets dainty and ruffled and white,
And fancy and frilly and blue,
And pink and coquettish, and crimson and gray,
And delicate lavender, too,
The farmer's fair daughters came down to the gate
And stopped in the late afternoon,
Where a roving old fiddler in rustiest black,
Was playing a rollicking tune.

They hung all their sunbonnets up on the fence
When the music got into their feet,
And they danced and they danced till the fiddler fell dead,
And changed into hundreds of crickets,
And, forgetting their sunbonnets, homeward they ran,
And behold! they still hang on the pickets.

The question of plow-sole [illegible] by plowing our grain fields to a uniform level year after year [illegible] and is now one of the [illegible] problems for solution.

The plow-sole of the [illegible] valley has been the direct cause of reducing our barley and wheat tonnage to less than one-half of what it was some years ago.

This plow-sole really amounts to hard-pan, and is a great hindrance to successful farming in all countries and with every kind of land; but, especially is this true in semi-arid regions like the San Joaquin Valley, where the annual rainfall is often below ten inches.

Ten inches of winter rain is ample to make good crops of grain where the land has been broken up to a depth of from six to eight inches, but it is quite insufficient to make a crop where a plow-sole is maintained at from three to four inches below the surface of the land.

The plow-sole prevents the moisture from going into the soil and subsoil, to any considerable extent, even though it be very abundant. In the case of light precipitation, where the plow-sole is permitted to remain in fact, short crops or no crops at all invariably result.

Our most skillful farmers understand this matter very well indeed, and are now found leagued against plow-sole and hard-pan wherever found. Not only is this true, but the grain farmers who are really worth while are conserving soil-moisture by what is known as "the dry-farming pan" that is, by harrowing and crossharrowing the growing grain. This practice is now well-established in the best grain sections of the great valleys.

In addition to the plow sole referred to, nature has, in certain localities, formed a concrete hard-pan of variable thickness, which is often very difficult to handle with anything like satisfactory results. This cemented hardpan varies in thickness from an inch or two, to a foot or two and in spots to a thickness of several feet, with a very irregular or uneven surface, being in places on the surface or near it, and in other places being overlaid with several feet of soil and sub soil.

We are now fully informed as to the injurious effects of this hard-pan, when planted to orchards and vineyards, and in consequence we prepare those fields, before planting, by breaking up this cement hard-pan with blasts, making holes through it with giant powder or a form of dynamite.

Some of our most prolific orchards have been treated in this manner; for, strange as it may seem, the sub-soil beneath the hardpan has been invariably found to be rich in plant food and usually moist throughout the entire year.

Other growths are hampered and restricted by the hard-pan, so that very little of value may be raised on land where this cement reaches the surface of the soil at frequent intervals, or is near it throughout the fields or orchards.

The question arises: Would it not pay to blast and break up the entire hard-pan area before planting, or blast the unbroken cement between the rows of trees or vines which, under our practice, remains intact? In other words "plow" all the land with dynamite?

This brings me to Mr. C. B. Edwards' story in the current number of the Technical World Magazine entitled "Plowing with Dynamite."

Mr. Edwards states in this article that Henry Caldwell of Spantanburg, N. C., is the first man to utilize commercial dynamite in "plowing land."

Up to the present time his soil has been stirred or "broken" by means of a turn plow.

This common implement, drawn by one or two horses, breaks the land only to a depth of four or five inches and this is insufficient for the clayey soil of the compact, sticky character which exists on the large farm of Mr. Caldwell.

The toe of the plow, moreover, acts upon the subatrata of clay just as a plane does on a plank. It smooths or dresses the clay and packs it so that it will hold water.

When seasons of heavy or excessive rain are encountered the plowed top soil floats off and leaves the land devoid of the necessary plant food which the crop to be grown must have. The result is that more money must be spent in fertilizing the field, else by a plentiful use of manure the land must in some way be brought back to its former condition of fertility.

It has been demonstrated that a farm, such as Mr. Caldwell's, which is located largely over hard-pan, cannot be fertilized to the extent that it should be. At every unusual fall of moisture the costly fertilizer will be washed off the land on to that of a lucky neighbor. In any event the fertilizer on such land will only penetrate to a depth of four or five inches, the hard-pan effectually preventing the further ingress of fertilizer and making the plant-food available only to the surface roots of the crop grown.

In order to overcome this difficulty and allow the fertilizer to sink far in and become a permanent reserve of plant food in the soil it is at once apparent that the land must be broken to much greater depths than is possible with the ordinary plow. This is nothing new, it is true, for the subsoil plow has been used for many years back and is a direct result of reasoning along these lines.

But Mr. Caldwell has used a subsoil plow on his land and declares it totally unfit for use on clay or hardpan land. The subsoil plow is a heavy T-shaped steel implement. In use, the top part of the T goes along with the subsoil and cuts the soil at a distance of about a foot from the surface.

The subsoil plow gives no mixing movement to the under strata, nor does it do more than simply give the soil a slight ventilation. The subsoil plow, on account of the depth at which it works, is also very hard on men and horses and it is impossible to plow over two acres a day in the clay land on Mr. Caldwell's farm.

While the effects of sub-plowing were beneficial, in a way, and showed results in a slight increase in crop-production, the result, as a whole, was not satisfactory.

When the subsoiling was done on clay land, Mr. Caldwell found that the subsoil plaw broke up the capillary attraction which permitted plants to draw on the subsoil in time of drought, and in times of rain, the water would not penetrate the clay land beyond the depth of the subsoil-plowing.

In view of these things Mr. Caldwell drew the conclusion that the land must be broken to a depth of four or five feet to permit of the doing away with terraces to prevent the washing of the surface soil.

He had observed that where stumps had been pulled out, or any deep excavation had been made in the soil great improvements in the crops could readily be observed over those of surrounding soil.

The crops in such situations did not wither from drought, and in time of rain the surface-soil, with its valuable plant-food, was not washed away and lost. The experimenter and owner said:

"I have had occasion to open graves which had been dug fifty years ago, and I always found the land soft and permeable to the bottom. I have opened old wells that had been filled up with earth, and could easily follow the sides all the way down by the difference in the density of the soil. My conclusion from these observations was that when clay was once disturbed to a depth of four feet, it will never pack to its original condition, and for that reason will always hold its moisture and plant-food for the growth of crops.

"The cost of breaking land to this depth has been the problem. No horse power is adequate to the task, and the cost of digging is prohibitive. It seemed to me that the only key to the situation law in the use of dynamite.

"I began by exploding a stick of dynamite in each of my watermelon hills, and the resulting increase, amounting to 33 per cent of the crop, allowed me to pay for the dynamite and have an increased profit besides. I next tried plowing a cotton field in the usual manner and, after plowing, followed in the furrow and charged two acres of it with seventy-five pounds of dynamite to the acre. The dynamite cartridges were put two feet apart in rows marked with a single shovel plow."

This method of planting the cartridges was simple: one man walked ahead with a crowbar and stuck it into the ground about three feet; the man following affixed a primer of cap to the stick of dynamite and two feet of fuse, and tamped it into the hole with a rake handle, finally leaving only the white fuse protruding. Incidentally, the dynamite used was of the strength ordinarily used for blasting stumps and is not so costly as that used in rock quarries.

After the planting of the dynamite charges a large crowd of the native population gathered near the field of operations to witness what they regarded as the novel whim of one of their most progressive farmers.

The negroes of the locality did not know what to make of the proceedings and looked with awe upon the operations calculated to wrench from nature the productive crops she refused to yield to their simple methods.

The exploding of the charges of coal was not without its amusing side. Many of the nearby neighbors hearing that several hundred pounds of dynamite were to be exploded removed household belongings and adjourned to their farthermost premises, window frames were taken out, and the sheriff importuned to hold up the exploding of the charged field, made a formal call upon Mr. Caldwell to come to an agreement in regard to the inevitable damages which the neighbors felt sure would ensue.

In exploding the field, four rows were set off at a time, one man going rapidly down each row lighting fuses with a red hot iron as he went. The result was not unlike the setting off of a great bunch of firecrackers. The explosions came thick and fast, and both the sub and surface soils were sent into the air in clouds, falling on the land in a powdery mist, and leaving periodical holes where the cartridges were planted about four and a half feet deep.

In one case where twelve rows were set off at the same time the effect was quite awe-inspiring, the reports were blended into a continuous roar and the row of a dozen men lighting fuses were pursued by an ever rising wave of soil.

The danger to the men lighting the fuses is trifling.

After the charges are exploded the field looks not unlike a great colander set with innumerable holes where the charges of dynamite were set, and the soil is broken up into unusually fine particles and well aerated.

BEST TIME TO CUT ALFALFA.

There seems to be no uniform practice among the farmers of this valley respecting the best time to make the several cuttings of alfalfa during the growing season.

Some farmers cut it at the very first appearance of bloom; others cut at 25 per cent of bloom; some at 50 per cent of bloom, and then there are those who wait until their alfalfa is in full bloom, which is the old and now, almost obsolete plan.

The matter is in important one, since it affects very materially, not only the quality of the hay, but its quantity during the cutting season.

This question was taken up last week by a Kings county farmer who, being in doubt as to the proper time to cut alfalfa in this valley for best results, wrote to the editor of the Rural Press on the subject, in the following manner:

"I have rented an alfalfa ranch on shares from a man who knows practically nothing as to when the alfalfa should be cut for the most economical production from the standpoint of yield, per acre, as well as the feeding value of the hay. I have sold my share to an alfalfa-meal mill, and they have asked me to cut it when about 'one-tenth in blossom,' and I have been cutting it at that stage and I find that here the new buds appear just about at that stage. The owner of the land wishes me to cut it when only about ten inches high (at that stage the yield would be probably less than one-eighth), and I am refusing to do it. If you can uphold the practice of cutting when about one-tenth in bloom, please do so, and state whether you would consider it doing it in a good, farmer-like manner, as our agreement calls for doing it that way."

In reply to this query, Prof. Wickson, dean of the California College of Agriculture and editor of the Rural Press says:

"You are perfectly right in cutting your alfalfa when it is approximately one-tenth in bloom. To cut before the bloom, is to lose a large weight and not to attain the highest feeding value. To cut when in full bloom increases the proportion of stemminess and loss of leaves which reduces the feeding value.

"The result of many experiments and observations is that the field should be cut early in bloom, and the common figure of 'one-tenth in bloom' is about as true a general rule as can be set up. This would certainly be regarded as a good farmer like manner of handling alfalfa hay."

THE WASTREL.

Once, when I was little, as the summer dark was falling,
Among the purple upland fields I lost my barefoot way;
The road to home was hidden fast, and frightful shadows, crawling
Along the sky-line, swallowed up the last kind light of day;
And then I seemed to hear you
In the twilight, and be near you;
Seemed to hear your dear voice calling—
Through the meadows, calling, calling—
And I followed and I found you,
Flung my tired arms around you,
And rested on the mother-breast, returned, tired out, from play.

Down the years that followed, though
I trod strange paths unheeding,
Though I chased the jack-o'-lanthorns of so many maddened years,
Though I never looked behind me where the home-lights were receding,
Though I never looked enough ahead to see the Inn of Fears;
Still I knew your heart was near me,
That your ear was strained to hear me,
That your love would need no pleading
To forgive me, but was pleading
Of its self that, in disaster,
I should run to you the faster
And be sure that I was dearer for your sacrifice of tears.

Now on life's last summertime the long last dusk is falling,
And I, who trod one way so long, can tread no other way
Until at death's dim crossroads I watch, hesitant, the crawling
Night passages that maze me with the ultimate dismay.
Then when Death and Doubt shall blind me—
Even then—I know you'll find me;
I shall hear you, Mother, calling—
Hear you calling—calling—calling:
I shall fight and follow—find you
Though the grave-clothes swathe and bind you.
And I know your love will answer:
"Here's my laddie home from play!"

PLANNING TO CHANGE FACES OF PAPER MONEY TO SYSTEMATIZE CURRENCY SYSTEM OF U. S.

Treasury Department May Reduce the Number of Designs From Nineteen to Nine and Make Bills Some Inches Smaller in Size.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 10.—For more than a year the Treasury Department has contemplated a systematization of the designs for United States notes and gold and silver certificates and a reduction in the size of paper currency. No less than nineteen miscellaneous portrait and historic designs appear upon the issues now current. These serve no useful purpose in identifying the denomination of notes with the designs they bear nor have they been selected according to any scheme of historical balance. As an example of existing confusion, the present dollar silver certificate bears the portraits of both Lincoln and Grant. The plan is to reduce these nineteen miscellaneous designs to nine, selecting the portraits with some reference to the importance and position of their subjects in American history and using the same portrait on one denomination throughout. The faces would be placed in the center of the note and would enable the holder to determine at a glance the denomination.

For example, the dollar note, which is in most common circulation, might bear the portrait of Washington, as the emancipator of the country and the founder of its government; the $2 note, that of another famous American, and so on for all the separate denominations.

Such reclassification is believed to be the more advisable as it will enable cashiers of banks and other expert money handlers the more readily to detect counterfeits, experience having clearly shown that it is impossible for the most expert engraver to reproduce an exact facsimile of a portrait, even if the face has been engraved by himself.

The class to which the note belongs, whether gold or silver certificate or United States note, may readily be determined by varying the color in which the seal on the right side of the note and the denomination numeral on the left are printed. The printing of these will continue to be done by a separate process, hence the distinction suggested involves no additional expense. The name of the class will be repeated as many times on the face and back of the note as at present.

PLAN TO REDUCE SIZE.

The department might feel warranted in proceeding to change the designs of the notes without awaiting the suggestions of banking institutions, but a somewhat different proposition is presented in the plan to reduce the size of the notes to 6 by 2½ inches. The department recognizes that public convenience is more or less involved in a system to which most of the cash drawers and pocketbooks of the country have been adapted, hence it is disposed to welcome criticisms and suggestions from bankers and business men before attempting any radical change.

Under authority of Secretary MacVeagh, a special committee of treasury officials has been at work for months upon the details involved in the change of designs and the suggested reduction in the size of paper currency. This committee has canvassed with equal candor the advantages of and the objections to the plan. Discussing the details of popular interest involved, Secretary MacVeagh makes the following statement:

"I am hopeful that the public will consider favorably, as the Treasury Department is inclined to consider favorably, the economies and other advantages which would result ultimately from the use of a somewhat smaller paper currency. The present size of paper currency is 3.04 inches wide by 7.28 inches long, and it has been suggested that our notes be reduced to 2½ inches wide by 6 inches long, the same size as the Philippine paper currency, which has proved an unqualified success—and a size which, when it is not scrutinized, would not, to most people, present a noticeable change. From the treasury point of view, the proposed reduction would result in an estimated saving to the government of $612,603 every year. This economy would be gained from various sources. For example, we would print five notes where we print four now, and the increased production of 25 per cent more notes with the same labor as at present, carried through all the various processes of wetting, examining, counting, drying, numbering, sealing, separating, etc., would save more than $200,000 a year alone. The saving in the cost of paper would be almost $90,000, and the decrease in the cost of plate printing would amount to almost $270,000. These, with a possible reduction of the force in the redemption division of the treasurer's office, due to the smaller number of notes redeemed because of the longer life of the smaller notes, represent the chief items in this estimate of $612,000.

TAKE CARE OF EMPLOYES.

"The temporary reduction of force, so far as it concerns the personnel of the Treasury Department, may be disregarded, I think, for we have already instituted, in adopting other new processes, the policy of filling vacancies from the inside instead of the outside. The disturbance of our forces would be very slight, and all employes dropped would be taken care of quickly, if not at the start. It must be borne in mind that the business of the government is growing all the time, and that hundreds of vacancies occur in the Treasury Department every year, and we can usually avoid personal hardship in the case of employes who are displaced by re-employing our own force as vacancies occur instead of taking in outsiders. We have followed this policy in the recent installation of labor-saving methods in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and other branches of the treasury, and it has worked well.

"On the popular side, I am inclined to think the change would cause little if any inconvenience and would quickly be commended by the people. The smaller notes could be carried flat and, being preserved in that shape, would not wear from folding and would be more readily handled by cashiers, tellers and clerks. We have carefully experimented with bank clerks and tellers in the city of Washington and learn that the smaller notes do not tend to cramp the hands of persons manipulating them, as do the present notes, and that they are just as easily handled and counted as the old notes. The smaller notes could be more closely packed on the counters of the banks and, in fact, banks as well as subtreasuries probably could store 25 per cent more of the new than of the old notes in their vaults.

"It will not be necessary to change the dimensions of cash drawers, tills, compartments, etc., which now hold the present size of money as they will hold also currency of the size proposed. This would not be true, of course, if the suggestions were to enlarge the size of the notes.

TWO SIZES OBJECTION.

"The only objection to adopting smaller notes which seems to me of special importance is that for some time two sizes of paper money would be in use and bank tellers and the business public would be correspondingly inconvenienced. I think, however, that this objection could be largely if not almost wholly overcome by preparing in advance enough of the new notes so that there could be exchanged for old notes on a fixed date at all sub-treasuries, banks, and other large financial institutions. Preparation for the change, including the making of designs and plates and the printing of notes, probably would require eighteen months, and within that time, no doubt, enough new notes could be printed to make possible an almost complete change. The people themselves would aid this change naturally and rapidly in their desire to secure specimens of the new money. I am convinced that the criticisms of the proposed issue are based rather upon considerations of temporary inconvenience than upon essential and insurmountable objections. If this is the case, these objections should hardly be permitted to stand in the way of permanent progress and economy.

"No special legislation is necessary to enable the government to reduce the size of United States notes and gold and silver certificates. In order, however, to effect a reduction in the size of national-bank currency without legislation, and at the same time continue the present multiplicity of designs, it would be necessary to eliminate the 12,000 plates now in use and to engrave as many more. This could be done, I presume, only by the government's assumption of the expense of new plates, and as each plate costs $75, the total cost of the new series would reach about $900,000. It would be quite possible, however, to use the same uniform engraved plates for all bank notes, and to print later by separate process the name of the individual bank upon the notes which that bank was to issue.

"Another plan would be to secure legislative authority for a uniform circulating note, which would do away with the necessity for the special notes for individual banks. Only 200 or 300 plates would be needed, and they would cause the banks no appreciable expense.

IMPROVEMENT LIKELY.

"If it is decided to remodel our paper currency along the lines proposed, I am sure that in doing so we can make great improvements in the quality of the designs through the elimination of many incoherent and meaningless features which now are confused without order on most of our notes, and by seeing to it that the various features are arranged more harmoniously and are drawn with a finer sense of proportion and selection than at present. While the actual engraving of our present notes leaves nothing to be desired, the designing of the notes indicates little more appreciation for harmonious composition than the ordinary letter headings of most commercial firms. As these designs on the paper currency are reproduced millions of times and pass through the hands of nearly 1,000,000 people, it is worth while for us to take pains to make them models not merely of engraving but of design.

"I believe the people have the right to be consulted when the department is contemplating plans like this, which, in their execution, may affect every person in the country, and the right to feel that no arbitrary action will be taken in matters of this kind. I am inclined to believe the changes proposed are for the benefit not only of the government, but of the people, but the department will welcome from bankers, business men, and others any suggestions, whether in criticism or otherwise, affecting the plan we have in mind."

ADVANTAGES SUMMARIZED.

The advantages to be expected from the proposed uniformity in designs and reduction in size of the national-bank notes as outlined by Mr. MacVeagh may be summarized as follows:

1. Uniformity with United States notes and certificates, thus making all paper issues in circulation of the same size, with the same portrait for identical denominations.

2. Reduction in the force of the office of the comptroller of the currency in receiving currency from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in its shipments to the banks.

3. Reduction in vault space required by the comptroller of the currency because of the diminution in the size of the notes, and the avoidance of the necessity for the comptroller of the currency to carry a reserve supply for each bank, as his stock would be common to all banks.

4. Saving of a large number of sheets which are held ready for issue, but which are canceled because the banks for which they are prepared go into liquidation. This estimate was 854,000 sheets in the last fiscal year. At present the treasury has to keep a reserve stock of notes always on hand for each of the 7000 active national banks. The proposed plan would result in an estimated saving of $40,000 a year.

5. Reduction of force in national redemption agency through probable elimination of assortment by charter numbers of the notes submitted for redemption.

6. In times of panic or money stringency the proposed uniform currency would be particularly helpful. The banks could then send the necessary amount of bonds to the nearest subtreasury and get their equivalent in currency. This could be done in the short space of time required for counting the bonds and making the book entry. In 1907 banks sending to Washington for their own notes had to wait sometimes three or four weeks before the currency could be supplied.

7. The main advantage, however, of making these changes in the bank notes is the fact that they will render possible changes in our other forms of paper money which will save the government more than $600,000 a year, and will give the people a cleaner, more convenient, and more artistic currency.

To fit his massive head,
And such a pair of shoulders
Were his, that he became Admired by all beholders

He was a college hero:
The classics he had read
Enough to know that Nero,
Poor chap! indeed, was dead.
His spelling and his grammar
Left much to be desired,
But, when he threw the hammer,
By all he was admired.

He was a college hero;
We mourned him when he fled,
With knowledge nearly zero,
To earn his daily bread.
We wonder if he's wiser
As daily he displays
